I. INTRODUCTION

Petitioner hereby applies to the Court for authorization to file a second or successive motion under 28 U.S.C. § 2255, based on the Supreme Court's recent decision in Johnson v. United States, 135 S. Ct. 2551 (2015). Because Johnson announced a new, previously unavailable rule of constitutional law, which has been made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court, this Court should authorize the filing of Petitioner's Section 2255 motion in district court for the Central District of California, and should deem that petition filed in the district court nunc pro tunc to the date of the filing of this application for authorization to file this second or successive petition.¹

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

A. Conviction and Sentencing

Mr. Day was charged in a three-count Indictment. (Ex. A, Indictment, CR 13.) On May 14, 1999, he pleaded guilty without a plea agreement to all of the charges in the Indictment against him: one count of conspiracy to commit bank robbery, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 371 (Count 1); one count of armed bank robbery, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d) (Count 2); and one count of use of a firearm during a crime of violence, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 924(c) (Count 3).

¹ Pursuant to Circuit Rule 22-3(a)(1), a copy of the Section 2255 motion Petitioner seeks to file in the district court is attached as Exhibit 1. "Ex." followed by a letter refers to an exhibit to the Section 2255 motion. The Presentence Report has been filed concurrently under seal.

(Ex. B, Change of Plea Hearing Transcript, CR 59.) On October 25, 1999, he was sentenced to 288 months imprisonment under the then-mandatory Sentencing Guidelines—60 months on Count 1, 204 months on Count 2, to be served concurrently, and a mandatory consecutive 84 months on Count 3 (the Section 924(c) count). (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, CR 59, at 37; Ex. D, Judgment and Commitment Order, CR 53.)²

Two things drove Mr. Day's sentence. First, the Section 924(c) charge: Count 3 of the Indictment charged Mr. Day with violating Section 924(c) when he “knowingly used and carried a firearm, namely, a loaded .38 caliber revolver, during and in relation to a crime of violence, namely, robbery of Home Savings of America . . . in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2113(a), by brandishing the pistol at the employees and customers[.]” (Ex. A, Indictment, at 6.)³ By operation of law, this 924(c) conviction carried a mandatory consecutive sentence of 84 months. (Ex. B, Change of Plea Hearing Transcript, at 26; see also 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1).)

³ While Count 3 of the Indictment describes the predicate offense as “bank robbery in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2113(a),” Count 2, the predicate, is actually for armed bank robbery in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d). This Petition addresses both unarmed and armed bank robbery as a 924(c) predicate, out of an abundance of caution.

Second, Mr. Day was found to be a career offender. The Presentence Report (“PSR”) concluded that Mr. Day was a career offender under U.S.S.G. § 4B1.1 because the instant offense, armed bank robbery in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d) “meets the definition of a ‘crime of violence’ as set forth in Section 4B1.2(a)”, and Mr. Day also had the requisite two prior qualifying felony convictions. (PSR ¶¶ 47-50.) The first career offender predicate was Mr. Day’s 1992 conviction for possession with intent to distribute cocaine, in violation of 21 U.S.C. 841(a)(1). (PSR ¶¶ 48; 64-70; U.S. District Court, Western District of Tennessee, Dkt. No. 90-20034.) The second of the career offender predicates was Mr. Day’s 1995 conviction for bank robbery, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a). (PSR ¶¶ 49; 71-75.)

The career offender finding and Mr. Day’s Section 924(c) conviction both had a significant impact on Mr. Day’s sentence. The PSR found that his non-career-offender offense level was 27, but that his career-offender offense level was 31, a swing of four levels. (PSR ¶ 44; 54.) Moreover, because all career offenders are automatically placed in Criminal History Category VI, see U.S.S.G. § 4B1.1(b), the career offender determination increased Mr. Day’s criminal history category from V to VI. (PSR ¶¶ 79-80.) In total, then, the career offender determination caused Mr. Day’s guideline range to jump from 120-140 months to 188-235 months. (PSR ¶ 115.) In addition, the Section 924(c) conviction on

Count 3 added a mandatory consecutive 84 months on top of that, for a total guidelines range of 272-319 months. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 37.)

Mr. Day argued that his criminal history was overstated based on the minor nature of his predicate prior conviction for possession of cocaine and the fact that the offense occurred when he was young. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 11:6-16; 18-19.) Additionally, Mr. Day sought a downward departure based upon extraordinary childhood abuse. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 11:17-23; 13-18.)

The court declined to depart from the guideline range, agreeing with the government that the circumstances of the prior controlled substance offense and the nature of the drug that was possessed made it an appropriate predicate for the career offender designation. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 11:24-25; 12:1-4; 32.) The court also found that although it had the discretion to make a downward departure based on extraordinary childhood abuse, it did not think a departure was warranted in this case. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 12-13.)

At the sentencing hearing held on October 25, 1999, the district court imposed a term of 288 months imprisonment, consisting of 60 months on Count 1 and 204 months on Count 2, to be served concurrently, and a mandatory consecutive 84 months on Count 3 (the Section 924 (c) count). (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 37.)

Mr. Day did not file a direct appeal of his case.

B. Section 2255 Motion

On November 7, 2000, Mr. Day filed a motion pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255, claiming: (1) his attorney was ineffective in that he misadvised Mr. Day regarding the statutory maximum sentence under 18 U.S.C. § 924(c) and pressured Mr. Day into pleading guilty; (2) the career offender determination overstated the seriousness of his prior criminal history; and (3) he should have received a downward departure for extraordinary childhood abuse. (Ex. E, Motion to Vacate, Set Aside or Correct Sentence By a Person in Federal Custody, CR 61; Ex. F, Order Denying Section 2255 Petition, CR 79; Case No. CV 00-11896, Dkt. 1.) The district court denied Mr. Day's Section 2255 motion on November 29, 2001. (Ex. F, Order Denying Section 2255 Petition.)

C. Subsequent Filings

On November 29, 2001, Mr. Day filed a motion pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15 for leave of court to file a supplement on newly discovered evidence. (CR 5; Ex. G, Motion for Leave of Court Pursuant to Rule 15, CR 79.) On December 11, 2001, Mr. Day filed a motion for reconsideration pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b), which was denied on December 12, 2001. (Ex. H, Motion for Reconsideration Pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 60(b), CR 82-84.) The district court denied a certificate of appealability on January 2, 2002, and the Ninth Circuit denied a certificate of appealability on June 13, 2002. (CR 87; CA 02-55034, Dkt. 1, 11.)

D. The Instant Claims⁴

To be sentenced as a career offender, a defendant must have at least two prior convictions for crimes of violence or controlled substance offenses, and the instant offense must be a crime of violence or a controlled substance offense. Moreover, to be convicted and sentenced under 18 U.S.C. Section 924(c), a defendant's instant offense must be a crime of violence. Here, the district court found that Petitioner's conviction for 18 U.S.C. § 2113 (a), (d) was a crime of violence under both Section 924(c) and the career offender guideline, and that his prior conviction for 18 U.S.C. § 2113 (a) was also a crime of violence. After Johnson, and for reasons set out more fully in the attached 2255 petition and incorporated herein, Petitioner's prior conviction and his instant offense no longer satisfy the definition of "crime of violence" in U.S.S.G. § 4B1.2 (a) or Section

⁴ Because the Second or Successive Application requires this Court only to determine whether the prima facie requirements of Section 2255(h) are met, and because the Court is decidedly not to dive deeply into the merits of the petition, the claims are presented here in summary form. Woratzeck v. Stewart, 118 F.3d 648, 650 (9th Cir. 1997) (per curiam) (The "possible merit" inquiry focuses on whether "it appears reasonably likely that the application satisfies the stringent requirements for the filing of a second or successive petition," not on the merit of the underlying claims.) The full analysis regarding these legal claims is, however, presented in the Petition attached to this Application, and rather than repeat them here, Petitioner incorporates those arguments by reference. Moreover, Petitioner does not raise any procedural barriers to relief at this stage; such hurdles are defenses that are the government's to raise (or waive, as they choose), and are not properly considered at this phase in any event, per Woratzeck v. Stewart. If the Court intends to consider any affirmative defense, Petitioner requests that the Court order a response and receive full briefing on the issue before deciding.

924(c), and as such, he should be resentenced without the career-offender designation and without the mandatory consecutive sentence mandated by Section 924(c).

To the best of counsel's knowledge, Petitioner has not raised these claims in any prior habeas petition.

II. ARGUMENT

A. Petitioner Has Made a Prima Facie Showing that His Successive Section 2255 Motion Satisfies the Gatekeeping Conditions in 28 U.S.C. § 2255 (h).

Before a federal prisoner may file a successive motion in the district court under Section 2255, a court of appeals must certify that the motion satisfies one of the “gatekeeping” conditions in 28 U.S.C. § 2255 (h). A court of appeals should authorize a successive 2255 motion when the individual makes a “prima facie showing,” 28 U.S.C. § 2244 (b)(3)(C), that his application satisfies one of the substantive grounds for a successive motion. See 28 U.S.C. § 2255 (h) (incorporating the standards from 2244 into 2255). This Court has explained that a “prima facie showing” is “simply a sufficient showing of possible merit to warrant a fuller exploration by the district court. . . .” Woratzeck v. Stewart, 118 F.3d 648, 650 (9th Cir. 1997) (per curiam) (quoting Bennett v. United States, 119 F.3d 468, 469 (7th Cir. 1997)). The “possible merit” inquiry focuses on whether “it appears reasonably likely that the application satisfies the stringent requirements for the filing of a second or successive petition,” not on the merit of the underlying claims. Woratzeck, 118 F.3d at 650 (quoting Bennett, 119 F.3d at 469). At this stage, this Court should not undertake a “preliminary assessment of the merit of the claims for which second or successive authorization is sought.” Ochoa v. Sirmons, 485 F.3d 538, 544 (10th Cir. 2007).

A federal prisoner may apply for leave to file a successive Section 2255 motion based on “a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court, that was previously unavailable.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255 (h)(2). Under this provision, a prisoner must make a prima facie showing that his motion is based on a (1) previously unavailable (2) new rule (3) of constitutional law (4) that has been made retroactive by the Supreme Court to cases on collateral review. Tyler v. Cain, 533 U.S. 656, 662 (2001); Ezell v. United States, 778 F.3d 762, 765 (9th Cir. 2015). The claims in Petitioner’s proposed Section 2255 motion, which depend on the rule announced in Johnson, satisfy that standard.

1. Johnson Announced a New Rule of Constitutional Law

First, Johnson’s rule is constitutional in nature. Johnson expressly holds that “imposing an increased sentence under the residual clause of the Armed Career Criminal Act violates the Constitution’s guarantee of due process.” 135 S. Ct. at 2563; see also id at 2557 (“Two features of the residual clause conspire to make it unconstitutionally vague.”); id. (“Increasing a defendant’s sentence under the clause denies due process of law.”).

It is well established that a rule is “new” if it was not “dictated by precedent existing at the time the defendant’s conviction became final.” Chaidez v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 1103, 1107 (2013) (quoting Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288, 301 (1989) (plurality op.)). Here, the rule announced in Johnson is new because it expressly overruled James and Sykes, which had previously found the residual clause was not void for vagueness. See Johnson, 135 S. Ct. at 2563 (“Our contrary holdings in James and Sykes are overruled.”); Whorton v. Bockting, 549 U.S. 406, 416 (2007) (“The explicit overruling of an earlier holding no doubt creates a new rule.”).

2. Petitioner Has Made a Prima Facie Showing That the Supreme Court Has Made Johnson Retroactive to Cases on Collateral Review.

A new rule has been “made retroactive to cases on collateral review” if “the Supreme Court holds it to be retroactive.” Tyler, 533 U.S. at 663. The Supreme Court has held that new substantive rules “generally apply retroactively,” while new procedural rules do not. Schrivo v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348, 351-52 (2004); see also Bousley v. United States, 523 U.S. 614, 620 (1998); Teague, 489 U.S. at 311 (plurality op.). Substantive rules include rules that “narrow the scope of a criminal statute by interpreting its terms,” Schrivo, 542 U.S. at 351-52, or “alter[] the range of conduct or the class of persons that the law punishes,” id. at 353.

The Supreme Court, in Welch v. United States held that Johnson v. United States was a “new substantive rule that has retroactive effect in cases on collateral review.” 578 U.S. ___, No. 15-6418, slip op. at 15, (Apr.18, 2016). It is substantive, the Court held, because it changed the substantive reach of a sentencing enhancement, “altering ‘the range of conduct or the class of persons [it] punishes.’” Id., slip op. at 9 (quoting Schrirro v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348, 353). “Johnson establishes . . . that ‘even the use of impeccable fact-finding procedures could not legitimate’ a sentence based on [the residual] clause.” And, after Johnson, “the residual clause is invalid . . . [and] it can no longer mandate or authorize any sentence.” Id., slip op. at 9. “It follows that Johnson is a substantive decision.” Id.

Just as clearly, the Welch Court held that Johnson is decidedly not a procedural rule. It does not “allocate decision making authority between judge and jury, or regulate the evidence that the court could consider in making its decision.” Id. (internal citations and quotation marks omitted). Rather, “Johnson affected the reach of the underlying statute rather than the judicial procedures by which the statute is applied.” Id.

The fact that Welch arose in the context of the Armed Career Criminal Act (“ACCA”) is of no effect. The holding of Welch is not limited to ACCA defendants; the Court states: “The residual clause is invalid under Johnson so it can no longer mandate or authorize any sentence.” Id. (emphasis added). “It follows that Johnson is a substantive decision,” id. -- not a substantive decision as it relates to ACCA defendants, but a substantive decision, full stop.

Under Teague, “either a rule is retroactive or it is not.” United States v. Doe, 810 F.3d 123, 154 & n.13 (3d Cir. 2015). As the government itself has previously argued, it was “not aware of any . . . chameleon-like rules” that “were substantive for some purposes and procedural for others.” Supplemental Brief for United States on Rehearing En Banc, Spencer v. United States, at 15 (11th Cir.) (No. 10-10676). Rather, a rule’s “status as a substantive rule is fixed,” and “does not fluctuate based on whether the prisoner is challenging an ACCA enhancement, a mandatory guidelines enhancement, or, as here, an advisory guidelines enhancement.” Id. at 15; see also Reina-Rodriguez v. United States, 655 F.3d 1182, 1189 (9th Cir. 2011) (en banc) (treating a rule that was substantive in the ACCA context as substantive in relation to the guidelines). Because Johnson is a substantive rule, it must be given retroactive effect, regardless of the context.

With respect to Petitioner’s 924(c) claim, in practice, a sentence under 924(c) operates the same way as an ACCA sentence; it authorizes a mandatory consecutive sentence that would otherwise be impossible to impose. Thus, as with ACCA, “[a]fter Johnson, the same person engaging in the same conduct is no longer subject to the Act and faces at most [the sentence authorized under the underlying crime].” Id. And, as with ACCA, “‘even the use of impeccable fact-finding procedures could not legitimate’ a sentence based on that clause.” Id. (citation omitted). For that reason, Johnson is retroactive to individuals sentenced under 924(c).

With respect to Petitioner’s career offender claim, Johnson is retroactive to the guidelines as well. That is, if Welch alone did not serve to make Johnson retroactive to the guidelines, certainly the Supreme Court has made the decision retroactive to the guidelines by a combination of holdings. It is beyond dispute that the Supreme Court “can establish that a holding applies retroactively either expressly or through the combination of the holdings from multiple cases.” See Hughes v. United States, 770 F.3d 814, 817 (9th Cir. 2014); see also Tyler, 533 U.S. at 666. For instance, the Supreme Court may hold in one case that a particular error is structural error, and then hold in another case that “all structural-error rules apply retroactively or that all structural-error rules fit within the second Teague exception.” Tyler, 533 U.S. at 666; see also id at 668-69 (“[I]f we hold in Case One that a particular type of rule applies retroactively to cases on collateral review and hold in Case Two that a given rule is of that particular type, then it necessarily follows that the given rule applies retroactively to cases on collateral review.”) (O’Connor, J., concurring).

Certainly the combined effect of Welch and Montgomery v. Louisiana, 577 U.S. ___, 136 S.Ct. 718 (2016), is to render a guideline sentence premised on the residual clause just as suspect as an ACCA sentence premised on the residual clause. In Montgomery, the Court considered whether Miller v. Alabama, the decision doing away with mandatory life without parole for juveniles, was a substantive rule that was retroactive to cases on collateral review. 136 S.Ct. at 726.

Importantly, Miller did not hold that courts could not impose life without parole on a juvenile, but only that a state could not have a statute that required a court to impose mandatory life without any ability to consider the juvenile's "capacity for change." Id. The Court held that even though Miller did not forbid imposition of a life sentence on a juvenile offender, it "'necessarily car[ried] a significant risk that a defendant' -- here the vast majority of juvenile offenders -- 'face a punishment that the law cannot impose upon him.'" Id. at 734 (internal citations omitted).

As with Miller, Johnson did not take away the power of the court to impose a sentence as high as the one called for by the career offender guideline. Nevertheless, for individuals whose guideline calculations tie back to the residual clause, Johnson "raises a grave risk that many are being held in violation of the Constitution." Montgomery, 136 S.Ct. at 736. Under the mandatory guidelines, it is clear that a person sentenced as a career offender based on the residual clause received a sentence he would not have received, but for the career offender guideline – the court was bound to impose that sentence in all but a few cases that fell outside of the "heartland" of the guideline. Koon v. United States, 518 U.S. 81, 95-96 (1996). But even under the advisory guidelines regime, the guidelines continue to provide an "anchoring" effect at sentencing; they constitute the starting point in analysis, and any deviation from that guideline must be explained and justified. Peugh v. United States, 133 S.Ct. 2072, 2083 (2013). Because of the gravitational pull of the guidelines, “after [Johnson], it will be the rare . . . offender who can receive th[e] same sentence.” Montgomery, 136 S.Ct. at 734.

Moreover, just as applied to ACCA, Welch, slip op. at 9, Johnson is clearly not a procedural rule as it applies to the guidelines. It does not “allocate decision-making authority” as between the judge and jury, or regulate the evidence that the court can consider in making its decision. Id. Because not “even the use of impeccable fact-finding procedures” could legitimate a sentence based on the residual clause, the rule must be substantive, wherever it appears. Id. (quoting United States v. United States Coin & Currency, 401 U.S. 715, 724 (1971)).

The holdings of multiple cases establish that Johnson has been made retroactive to cases on collateral review.

3. Johnson’s Rule Was “Previously Unavailable” to Petitioner.

Finally, Johnson’s new rule was “previously unavailable” in Petitioner’s prior proceedings. Although this Court has not expressly defined “previously unavailable,” the Fourth Circuit has held that “the word ‘previously’ refers to the last federal proceeding . . . in which the applicant challenged the same criminal judgment.” In re Williams, 364 F.3d 235, 239 (4th Cir. 2004). Here, Petitioner’s last proceeding challenging this criminal judgment was the December 11, 2001 motion for reconsideration of the court’s denial of his Section 2255 motion, which he filed in the district court on November 7, 2000. The district court denied the Section 2255 motion on November 29, 2001 and denied the motion for reconsideration on December 12, 2001, years before Johnson was decided.

Petitioner could not have availed himself of Johnson before this proceeding.

B. Because Petitioner Has Made a Prima Facie Showing As to Least One Claim in His Proposed Section 2255 Motion, This Court Should Authorize the Filing of the Entire Motion in District Court.

This Court has held that if a petitioner has made a prima facie showing that at least one claim in his proposed Section 2255 motion satisfies Section 2255(h), then “he may proceed upon his entire application in the district court.” Woratzeck, 118 F.3d at 650. Whether each individual claim in the motion ultimately satisfies Section 2255’s requirements for a second or successive petition is for the district court to decide. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 2244(b)(4); 2255(h) (incorporating procedures in Section 2244). Therefore, should this Court determine that either Petitioner’s career offender claim or his Section 924(c) claim demonstrates prima facie compliance with Section 2255(h)’s gatekeeping standard, it should authorize the filing of the entire Section 2255 motion in district court.

III.CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Petitioner requests that this Court grant him authorization to file the attached successive Section 2255 motion in the district court and order that the successive motion be filed nunc pro tunc as of May 18, 2016, the date of filing of his initial application.

MOTION TO VACATE, SET ASIDE, OR CORRECT SENTENCE UNDER 28 U.S.C. § 2255

I. INTRODUCTION

4 Petitioner Montez Day, by and through his attorney, Deputy Federal Public
5 Defender Brianna Fuller Mircheff, hereby submits this motion to vacate, set aside, or 6 correct his sentence, based on Johnson v. United States, 135 S. Ct. 2551 (2015). In 7 Johnson, the Supreme Court held that the residual clause of the Armed Career Criminal 8 Act, 18 U.S.C. § 924(e), is void for vagueness. Johnson's reasoning applies equally to 9 the residual clauses in the career offender guideline, U.S.S.G. § 4B1.2(a)(2), and in 18
10 U.S.C. § 924(c)(3)(B). Therefore, in light of Johnson, Mr. Day's sentence under 11 U.S.S.G. § 4B1.1 and seven-year mandatory consecutive sentence under 18 U.S.C.
12 § 924(c) were imposed in violation of the Constitution or the laws of the United States
13 and exceeded the maximum authorized by law.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

A. Conviction and Sentencing

17 Mr. Day was charged in a three-count Indictment. (Ex. A, Indictment, CR 13.)
18 On May 14, 1999, he pleaded guilty without a plea agreement to all of the charges in 19 the Indictment against him: one count of conspiracy to commit bank robbery, in 20 violation of 18 U.S.C. § 371 (Count 1); one count of armed bank robbery, in violation
21 of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d) (Count 2); and one count of use of a firearm during a crime
22 of violence, in violation of 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (Count 3). (Ex. B, Change of Plea
23 Hearing Transcript, CR 59.) On October 25, 1999, he was sentenced to 288 months
24 imprisonment under the then-mandatory Sentencing Guidelines—60 months on Count
25 1, 204 months on Count 2, to be served concurrently, and a mandatory consecutive 84

1 months on Count 3 (the Section 924(c) count). (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, CR 59,
2 at 37; Ex. D, Judgment and Commitment Order, CR 53.)¹

3 Two things drove Mr. Day’s sentence. First, the Section 924(c) charge: Count 3
4 of the Indictment charged Mr. Day with violating Section 924(c) when he “knowingly 5 used and carried a firearm, namely, a loaded .38 caliber revolver, during and in relation 6 to a crime of violence, namely, robbery of Home Savings of America . . . in violation of 7 Title 8, United States Code, Section 2113(a), by brandishing the pistol at the employees
8 and customers[.]” (Ex. A, Indictment, at 6.)² Mr. Day admitted that he was guilty of 9 this offense under a Pinkerton theory of liability. (Ex. B, Change of Plea Transcript, at 10 22.) By operation of law, this 924(c) conviction carried a mandatory consecutive 11 sentence of 84 months. (Ex. B, Change of Plea Hearing Transcript, at 26; see also 18 12 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1).)

13 Second, Mr. Day was found to be a career offender. The Presentence Report
14 (“PSR”) concluded that Mr. Day was a career offender under U.S.S.G. § 4B1.1 because 15 the instant offense, armed bank robbery in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d) “meets
16 the definition of a ‘crime of violence’ as set forth in Section 4B1.2(a)”, and Mr. Day 17 also had the requisite two prior qualifying felony convictions. (PSR ¶¶ 47-50.) The 18 first career offender predicate was Mr. Day’s 1992 conviction for possession with 19 intent to distribute cocaine, in violation of 21 U.S.C. 841(a)(1). (PSR ¶¶ 48; 64-70; 20 U.S. District Court, Western District of Tennessee, Dkt. No. 90-20034.) The second of 21 the career offender predicates was Mr. Day’s 1995 conviction for bank robbery, in 22 violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a). (PSR ¶¶ 49; 71-75.)

24

25 ¹ Unless otherwise indicated, all citations to “CR” refer to the clerk’s record in 26 CR 99-00123, Mr. Day’s underlying criminal case in this Court.

27 ² While Count 3 of the Indictment describes the predicate offense as “bank 28 robbery in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2113(a),” Count 2, the predicate, is actually for armed bank robbery in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d).
This Petition addresses both unarmed and armed bank robbery as a 924(c) predicate, out of an abundance of caution.

1 The career offender finding and Mr. Day's Section 924(c) conviction both had a
2 significant impact on Mr. Day's sentence. The PSR found that his non-career-offender
3 offense level was 27, but that his career-offender offense level was 31, a swing of four
4 levels. (PSR ¶ 44; 54.) Moreover, because all career offenders are automatically
5 placed in Criminal History Category VI, see U.S.S.G. § 4B1.1(b), the career offender
6 determination increased Mr. Day's criminal history category from V to VI. (PSR ¶¶
7 79-80.) In total, then, the career offender determination caused Mr. Day's guideline
8 range to jump from 120-140 months to 188-235 months. (PSR ¶ 115.) In addition, the 9 Section 924(c) conviction on Count 3 added a mandatory consecutive 84 months on top 10 of that, for a total guidelines range of 272-319 months. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, 11 at 37.)

12 Mr. Day argued that his criminal history was overstated based on the minor 13 nature of his predicate prior conviction for possession of cocaine and the fact that the 14 offense occurred when he was young. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 11:6-16; 18-15 19.) Additionally, Mr. Day sought a downward departure based upon extraordinary
16 childhood abuse. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 11:17-23; 13-18.)

17 The court declined to depart from the guideline range, agreeing with the 18 government that the circumstances of the prior controlled substance offense and the 19 nature of the drug that was possessed made it an appropriate predicate for the career
20 offender designation. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 11:24-25; 12:1-4; 32.) The 21 court also found that although it had the discretion to make a downward departure 22 based on extraordinary childhood abuse, it did not think a departure was warranted in 23 this case. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 12-13.)

24 At the sentencing hearing held on October 25, 1999, the district court imposed a
25 term of 288 months imprisonment, consisting of 60 months on Count 1 and 204 months
26 on Count 2, to be served concurrently, and a mandatory consecutive 84 months on 27 Count 3 (the Section 924(c) count). (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 37.)

28 Mr. Day did not file a direct appeal of his case.

B. Section 2255 Motion

On November 7, 2000, Mr. Day filed a motion pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255, claiming: (1) his attorney was ineffective in that he misadvised Mr. Day regarding the statutory maximum sentence under 18 U.S.C. § 924(c) and pressured Mr. Day into pleading guilty; (2) the career offender determination overstated the seriousness of his prior criminal history; and (3) he should have received a downward departure for extraordinary childhood abuse. (Ex. E, Motion to Vacate, Set Aside or Correct Sentence By a Person in Federal Custody, CR 61; Ex. F, Order Denying Section 2255 Petition, CR 79; Case No. CV 00-11896, Dkt. 1.) The district court denied Mr. Day's Section 2255 motion on November 29, 2001. (Ex. F, Order Denying Section 2255 Petition.)

C. Subsequent Filings

On November 29, 2001, Mr. Day filed a motion pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15 for leave of court to file a supplement on newly discovered evidence. (CR 5; Ex. G, Motion for Leave of Court Pursuant to Rule 15, CR 79.) On December 11, 2001, Mr. Day filed a motion for reconsideration pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b), which was denied on December 12, 2001. (Ex. H, Motion for Reconsideration Pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 60(b), CR 82-84.) The district court denied a certificate of appealability on January 2, 2002, and the Ninth Circuit denied a certificate of appealability on June 13, 2002. (CR 87; CA 02-55034, Dkt. 1, 11.

D. Second or Successive 2255 Motion

The instant Motion is filed in conjunction with a request for leave to file a second or successive petition in the Ninth Circuit.

III. ARGUMENT

Under 28 U.S.C. § 2255(a), a defendant is entitled to a resentencing when his original sentence was imposed “in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United

1 States,” or is “in excess of the maximum authorized by law.” Mr. Day is entitled to
2 relief on all these grounds because under Johnson v. United States, 135 S. Ct. 2251
3 (2015), he is now serving illegal and unconstitutional career offender and Section 4 924(c) sentences.

5 A. Mr. Day’s Section 924(c) Conviction, and the Resulting Seven-Year
6 Mandatory Consecutive Sentence, Must Be Vacated because the 7 Predicate Offense, Either Unarmed Bank Robbery or Armed Bank
8 Robbery, Is Not a Crime of Violence.

9 Section 924(c) provides for a series of graduated, mandatory consecutive 10 sentences for using or carrying a firearm during and in relation to a “crime of violence.”
11 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1)(A), (B). The term “crime of violence,” in turn, is defined as “an 12 offense that is a felony and—”

- 13 (A) has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical 14 force against the person or property of another, or
- 15 (B) that by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against 16 the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing 17 the offense.

18 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(3). As used in this brief, subsection (A) is called the “force clause”
19 and subsection (B) is called the “residual clause.”

20 Here, as noted, Count 3 of the Indictment charged Mr. Day with violating 21 Section 924(c) when he “knowingly used and carried a firearm, namely, a loaded .38 22 caliber revolver, during and in relation to a crime of violence, namely, robbery of 23 Home Savings of America . . . in violation of Title 8, United States Code, Section
24 2113(a), by brandishing the pistol at the employees and customers[.]” (Ex. A, 25 Indictment, at 6.) However, the predicate offense, Count 2, actually charged Mr. Day 26 with committing armed bank robbery in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d)[.]” (Ex.
27 A, Indictment, at 5.) Following Johnson, neither unarmed bank robbery nor armed 28 bank robbery is a crime of violence for purposes of Section 924(c).

In a 1990 case, the Ninth Circuit held that unarmed bank robbery was a crime of violence under U.S.S.G. § 4B1.2's force clause because unarmed bank robbery required that money or property be taken through force and violence or through intimidation, which amounted to a "threatened use of physical force." See United States v. Selfa, 918 F.2d 749, 751 (9th Cir. 1990). The decision's analysis was limited, reasoning only that acting in a way that would put an ordinary person in fear of bodily harm necessarily constituted the threatened use of force. Id. The Court also cited the application note to the guideline, which includes "robbery" as an enumerated offense. Id.

Similarly, in a 2000 case, the Ninth Circuit held that armed bank robbery was a crime of violence under the force clause of Section 924(c)(3)(A). United States v. Wright, 215 F.3d 1020, 1028 (9th Cir. 2000). The decision's analysis was limited, reasoning only "[a]rmed bank robbery qualifies as a crime of violence because one of the elements of the offense is a taking 'by force and violence, or by intimidation.'" Id. (citing 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a)).

There is much water under the bridge since Selfa and Wright were decided, however, and intervening Supreme Court and en banc Ninth Circuit decisions have undermined their reasoning that bank robbery was a crime of violence. Specifically, the Supreme Court issued a series of cases redefining the boundaries of the force clause, such that bank robbery no longer satisfies that clause for two independent reasons. Johnson, moreover, removed the alternative ground on which bank robbery could have been deemed a crime of violence: that bank robbery qualified as a predicate crime of violence under the residual clause. After Johnson, therefore, Mr. Day no longer has a qualifying crime of violence supporting his Section 924(c) conviction and sentence.

1. Neither Unarmed Bank Robbery Nor Armed Bank Robbery Qualifies as a Crime of Violence under the Force Clause.

To determine whether a predicate offense qualifies as a “crime of violence” under § 924(c), this Court must use the categorical approach. See United States v.

1 Amparo, 68 F.3d 1222, 1225 (9th Cir. 1995); United States v. Piccolo, 441 F.3d 1084,
 2 1086-87 (9th Cir. 2006) (“[I]n the context of crime-of-violence determinations under 3 § 924(c), our categorical approach applies regardless of whether we review a current or 4 prior crime.”); see also Descamps v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 2276, 2283 (2013)
 5 (applying categorical approach in case under ACCA, 18 U.S.C. § 924(e)). Under 6 Taylor, only the statutory definitions –i.e., the elements – of the predicate crime are 7 relevant to determine whether the conduct criminalized by the statute, including the 8 most innocent conduct, qualifies as a “crime of violence.” Taylor v. United States, 495
 9 U.S. 575, 599-601 (1990).

10 Determination of whether a criminal offense is categorically a crime of violence 11 is done by “assessing whether the ‘full range of conduct covered by [the statute] falls
 12 within the meaning of that term.’” United States v. Grajeda, 581 F.3d 1186, 1189 (9th 13 Cir. 2009) (citation omitted). To do this, courts must look “at the least egregious end of 14 [the. . . statute’s] range of conduct.” United States v. Baza-Martinez, 464 F.3d 1010, 15 1014 (9th Cir. 2006) (quoting United States v. Lopez-Solis, 447 F.3d 1201, 1206 (9th 16 Cir. 2006)). In other words, under the categorical approach, a prior offense can only 17 qualify as a “crime of violence” if all of the criminal conduct covered by a statute—18 “including the most innocent conduct” —matches or is narrower than the “crime of 19 violence” definition. United States v. Torres-Miguel, 701 F.3d 165, 167 (4th Cir.
 20 2012). If the statute punishes some conduct that would qualify as a crime of violence 21 and some conduct that would not, it does not categorically constitute a crime of 22 violence. Grajeda, 581 F.3d at 1189. In a “narrow range of cases,” if the statute is 23 divisible as to a material element, then the court may apply the modified categorical
 24 approach by looking beyond the statutory elements to certain documents of conviction
 25 to determine whether the defendant’s conviction necessarily involved facts
 26 corresponding to the generic federal offense. Descamps, 133 S. Ct. at 2283-84.

27 Intervening Supreme Court and en banc Ninth Circuit precedent following Selfa
 28 and Wright holds that to be a categorical match to the terms of the force clause in

1 Section 924(c), a state statute must require proof of both intentional conduct and violent
 2 force. As to intentional conduct, in Leocal v. Ashcroft, 543 U.S. 1, 9-10 (2004), the 3 Supreme Court held that a conviction under a Florida statute prohibiting driving under 4 the influence was not a crime of violence under the identical force clause in 18 U.S.C.
 5 Section 16(a) because the crime could be committed through mere negligence or even 6 accidental conduct. An en banc panel of the Ninth Circuit then interpreted Leocal as 7 requiring that, “to constitute a federal crime of violence an offense must involve the 8 intentional use of force against the person or property of another.” Fernandez-Ruiz v.
 9 Gonzales, 466 F.3d 1121, 1132 (9th Cir. 2006) (en banc) (emphasis added); see also 10 United States v. Dixon, 805 F.3d 1193, 1197 (9th Cir. 2015) (citing Leocal and holding 11 that the almost-identically worded force clause in the ACCA requires that “the use of 12 force must be intentional, not just reckless or negligent”); United States v. Serafin, 562
 13 F.3d 1105, 1108 (9th Cir. 2009) (applying Leocal’s gloss on 18 U.S.C. § 16 to Section 14 924(c)(3)); United States v. Acosta, 470 F.3d 132, 134-35 (2d Cir. 2006) (same).

15 “Physical force” has the meaning given to it by Leocal and the Supreme Court’s 16 2010 decision in Johnson v. United States, 559 U.S. 133, 140 (2010) (Johnson I). In 17 Leocal, in addition to interpreting the mens rea requirement of Section 16(a), the 18 Supreme Court also held that the phrase “physical force” in that section requires a 19 “violent, active crime[.]” 543 U.S. at 11. The Johnson I Court expanded on that 20 definition, holding that the phrase “physical force” in ACCA’s almost-identical force 21 clause defining “violent felony” means “violent force—that is, force capable of causing 22 physical pain or injury to another person.” Johnson I, 559 U.S. at 140.

23 A person violates the unarmed bank robbery statute if he, “by force and violence, 24 or by intimidation, takes or attempts to take, from the person or presence of another”
 25 the property of a bank. 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a). A person violates the armed bank robbery 26 statute if he, “by force and violence, or by intimidation, takes or attempts to take, from 27 the person or presence of another” the property of a bank and in so doing, “assaults any 28 person, or puts in jeopardy the life of any person by the use of a dangerous weapon or

1 device.” 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d). Thus, the elements of the armed bank robbery
2 offense are:

3 (1) the defendant took money belonging to a bank, credit union, or savings
4 and loan, (2) by using force and violence or intimidation, (3) the deposits
5 of the institution were insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance
6 Corporation (“FDIC”), and (4) in committing the offense, the defendant
7 assaulted any person, or put in danger the life of any person by the use of a 8 dangerous weapon.

9 Wright, 215 F.3d at 1028. Neither unarmed bank robbery nor armed bank robbery
10 requires an intentional threat of force, nor does it require a threat of violent force. As 11 such, neither unarmed bank robbery nor armed bank robbery is a crime of violence 12 under the force clause.

13 a. Neither Unarmed Bank Robbery Nor Armed Bank
14 Robbery Requires the Intentional Use or Threatened
15 Use of Force.

16 The first reason bank robbery is categorically overbroad and cannot support a 17 finding that a defendant’s predicate offense is a crime of violence under the force
18 clause is because the statute contains no requirement that a defendant have possessed 19 any mens rea with respect to either his or her use of force and violence or intimidation, 20 let alone that the defendant used force and violence or intimidation intentionally.

21 In Carter v. United States, 530 U.S. 255, 268 (2000), the Supreme Court held 22 that bank robbery is a general intent crime. That is, the defendant must have 23 “possessed knowledge with respect to the actus reus of the crime.” Id. As an example
24 of a hypothetical defendant who should not be punished under the statute, the Carter
25 Court wrote that “Section 2113(a) certainly should not be interpreted to apply to the 26 hypothetical person who engages in forceful taking of money while sleepwalking[.]”
27 Id. at 269. Following Carter, courts have held that the actus reus of bank robbery is the 28 taking of money and therefore, the statute requires a showing only that the defendant

1 “knew he was physically taking money.” See United States v. Yockel, 320 F.3d 818,
 2 823 (8th Cir. 2003). Whether the defendant took money via an intentional use of force
 3 and violence or intimidation is “irrelevant.” Id.; see also United States v. Kelley, 412
 4 F.3d 1240, 1244 (11th Cir. 2005) (“[A] defendant can be convicted under section
 5 2113(a) even if he did not intend for an act to be intimidating.”). Thus, in Yockel, the 6 Eighth Circuit affirmed the district court’s exclusion at trial of any evidence regarding 7 whether the defendant intended to use force and violence or intimidation. 320 F.3d at 8 823.

9 Yockel and Kelley are in accord with this Circuit’s longstanding, pre-Carter
 10 case law which also holds that, at least in cases involving intimidation, whether a 11 defendant “specifically intended to intimidate . . . is irrelevant.” United States v.
 12 Foppe, 993 F.2d 1444, 1451 (9th Cir. 1993). This holding stems from the court’s 13 conclusion that the definition of taking, or attempting to take “‘by intimidation’ means 14 willfully to take, or attempt to take, in such a way that would put an ordinary,
 15 reasonable person in fear of bodily harm.” United States v. Alsop, 479 F.2d 65, 67 n.4
 16 (9th Cir. 1973). Because this definition focuses on the effect of the accused’s actions 17 on the victim, “[t]he determination of whether there has been an intimidation should be 18 guided by an objective test focusing on the accused’s actions,” not his or her intent.
 19 Id.; see also United States v. Woodrup, 86 F.3d 359, 363 (4th Cir. 1996) (“The 20 intimidation element of § 2113(a) is satisfied if ‘an ordinary person in the [victim’s]
 21 position reasonably could infer a threat of bodily harm from the defendant’s acts,’ 22 whether or not the defendant actually intended the intimidation.”). Therefore, a 23 defendant may be convicted of federal unarmed bank robbery even though he did not 24 intend to put another in fear, but merely did some act that would put an ordinary,
 25 reasonable person in fear of bodily harm. It makes no difference in the analysis that a 26 defendant in an armed bank robbery case uses a dangerous weapon in the course of 27 committing the offense: whether he intentionally used the weapon is simply not an 28 element of the crime. Therefore, a defendant may be convicted of armed bank robbery

even though he did not intend to put another in fear, but merely did some act involving a dangerous weapon that would put an ordinary, reasonable person in fear of bodily harm. See United States v. Martinez-Jimenez, 864 F.2d 664, 666-67 (9th Cir. 1989) (Section 2113(d) “focuses on the harms created, not the manner of creating the harm.”).

As a statute must require the intentional use of force in order to match the definition of “use of force” in Section 924(c)’s force clause following Leocal and Fernandez-Ruiz, and because neither Section 2113(a) nor Section 2113(a), (d) requires any such showing, Selfa’s and Wright’s conclusions that bank robbery is a crime of violence under the force clause are no longer good law. See Miller v. Gammie, 335 F.3d 889, 899-900 (9th Cir. 2003) (en banc) (“[T]he issues decided by the higher court need not be identical in order to be controlling. Rather, the relevant court of last resort must have undercut the theory or reasoning underlying the prior circuit precedent in such a way that the cases are clearly irreconcilable.”). Following Leocal and Fernandez-Ruiz, federal bank robbery cannot be a crime of violence under the force clause.

b. Neither Unarmed Bank Robbery Nor Armed Bank Robbery Requires the Use or Threatened Use of Violent Force.

Moreover, neither unarmed bank robbery nor armed bank robbery requires the use or threat of violent physical force. Nothing in the term “intimidation” requires a threat of violent physical force. Intimidation is satisfied even where there is no explicit threat at all, let alone the threat of violent force. For example, a simple demand for money from a bank teller will support a bank robbery conviction. See United States v. Hopkins, 703 F.2d 1102, 1103 (9th Cir. 1983) (“Although the evidence showed that Hopkins spoke calmly, made no threats, and was clearly unarmed, we have previously held that ‘express threats of bodily harm, threatening body motions, or the physical possibility of concealed weapon[s]’ are not required for a conviction for bank robbery by intimidation.” (quoting United States v. Bingham, 628 F.2d 548, 549 (9th

1 Cir.1980))). But, as the Ninth Circuit recently held, an “uncommunicated willingness
 2 or readiness to use [physical] force . . . is not a threat to do so.” United States v.
 3 Parnell, 14-30208 slip op. at 8-9 (9th Cir. April 12, 2016). A threat of physical force, 4 as would satisfy the force clause “requires some outward expression or indication of an 5 intention to inflict pain, harm or punishment.” Id. Federal bank robbery has no such 6 requirement.

7 Further, the Ninth Circuit’s definition of intimidation does not require a showing 8 of the use or threatened use of violent physical force because placing a person “in fear 9 of bodily harm” does not necessarily require the use or threatened use of violent
 10 physical force. On this matter, the Fourth Circuit has “recognized that, to constitute a 11 predicate crime of violence justifying a sentencing enhancement under the Guidelines, 12 a [predicate] offense must constitute a use or threatened use of violent force, not simply 13 result in physical injury or death.” Torres-Miguel, 701 F.3d at 169; Accord United 14 States v. Cruz-Rodriguez, 625 F.3d 274, 276 (5th Cir. 2010); Chrzanoski v. Ashcroft,
 15 327 F.3d 188, 194 (2d Cir. 2003) (“there is ‘a difference between causation of an injury
 16 and in injury’s causation by the “use of physical force”’”); United States v. Perez-
 17 Vargas, 414 F.3d 1282, 1287 (10th Cir. 2005); Whyte v. Lynch, 807 F.3d 463, 469-72
 18 (1st Cir. 2015). For example, a defendant could commit bank robbery through 19 intimidation by threatening to poison the teller, but this would not constitute the 20 threatened use of violent physical force, even though it would result in the teller being 21 in fear of bodily harm. Cf. Torres-Miguel, 701 F.3d at 168-69 (holding that 22 California’s criminal threats statute does not constitute a crime of violence because “a 23 defendant can violate statutes like § 422(a) by threatening to poison another, which 24 involves no use or threatened use of force.”); Matter of Guzman-Polanco, 26 I. & N.
 25 Dec. 713 (BIA 2016) (“Caesar’s death at the hands of Brutus and his fellow
 26 conspirators was undoubtedly violent; the death of Hamlet’s father at the hands of his 27 brother, Claudius, by poison, was not.”) (quoting Rummel v. Estelle, 445 U.S. 263, 282 28 n.27 (1980)).

1 With respect to the deadly weapon element of Section 2113(d), a defendant may 2 be found guilty of armed bank robbery without engaging in conduct that involves the 3 use or threat of violent physical force. For example, a defendant's mere display of or 4 reference to possession of a gun, without making any threat to use the gun, is sufficient
 5 to sustain a conviction under section 2113(d). See United States v. Jones, 84 F.3d
 6 1206, 1211 (9th Cir. 1996); McLaughlin v. United States, 476 U.S. 16, 17-18 (1986);
 7 Martinez-Jimenez, 864 F.2d at 666.

8 Moreover, a defendant may be convicted of armed bank robbery even though he 9 displays or refers only to an unloaded or inoperable firearm, or even a toy resembling a 10 firearm. See McLaughlin, 476 U.S. 16, 17-18 (1986) (unloaded gun); Martinez-
 11 Jimenez, 864 F.2d at 666-67 (inoperable gun, toy gun); see also United States v. Boyd, 12 924 F.2d 945, 947-48 (9th Cir. 1991) (road flare qualifies as a dangerous weapon). This 13 conduct does not involve the use or threatened use of violent force. In McLaughlin, the 14 Supreme Court reasoned that an unloaded gun qualified as a dangerous weapon within 15 the meaning of Section 2113(d) because "a gun is an article that is typically and 16 characteristically dangerous . . . and the law reasonably may presume that such an 17 article is always dangerous even though it may not be armed at a particular time or 18 place" and because "the display of a gun instills fear in the average citizen; as a 19 consequence, it creates an immediate danger that a violent response will ensue." 476
 20 U.S. at 17-18. In other words, the McLaughlin court concluded that a robber's use of 21 an unloaded gun could be considered to put in danger another person's life not because 22 the robber could actually use the gun or because the gun actually posed a threat of 23 violence against anyone in the bank but merely because it was a reasonable position for 24 the law to take that all guns are dangerous, since as a general matter guns often are 25 dangerous. The Court also concluded that a robber's use of an unloaded gun could put 26 in danger another person's life not because the robber actually used or threatened to use 27 the gun in a violent, active way but only because others who saw the gun might 28 themselves react in a violent way. In the words of the Martinez-Jimenez court, "[t]he

1 McLaughlin opinion recognizes that the dangerousness of a device used in a bank
 2 robbery is not simply a function of its potential to injure people directly. Its 3 dangerousness results from the greater burdens that it imposes upon victims and law
 4 enforcement officers.” 864 F.3d at 666. As these cases make clear, defendants can be,
 5 and indeed many have been, convicted of armed bank robbery without using or 6 threatening to use violent force.

7 For these reasons, neither unarmed bank robbery nor armed bank robbery
 8 qualifies as a crime of violence under the force clause of Section 924(c). The contrary
 9 holdings in Selfa and Wright are clearly irreconcilable with Johnson I and Leocal. See
 10 Miller, 335 F.3d at 899-900.

11 2. Following Johnson, Neither Unarmed Bank Robbery Nor Armed 12 Bank Robbery Qualifies as a Crime of Violence under the 13 Residual Clause because that Clause Is Void for Vagueness.

14 Until Johnson, defendants like Mr. Day had little motivation to challenge Selfa’s 15 and Wright’s force clause holdings, knowing that their bank robbery predicates would 16 likely still be deemed crimes of violence under Section 924(c)’s residual clause.
 17 Indeed, prior to Johnson, the Ninth Circuit had held that various state robbery crimes
 18 were crimes of violence under the residual clause of several crime-of-violence
 19 definitions. See, e.g., United States v. Prince, 772 F.3d 1173, 1176 (9th Cir. 2014)
 20 (finding that California second degree robbery is a violent felony under the residual 21 clause of ACCA, because it “certainly” is the kind of crime that presents a serious
 22 potential risk of physical injury to another); United States v. Chandler, 743 F.3d 648, 23 652-55 (9th Cir. 2014) (Nevada conspiracy to commit robbery is a violent felony under 24 the residual clause), remanded pursuant to Johnson, 743 F.3d 648 (9th Cir. 2015); see 25 also United States v. McDougherty, 920 F.2d 569, 574 & n.3 (9th Cir. 1990) (“Clearly 26 then, robbery as defined in California falls under 18 U.S.C. 16(b) as a felony that ‘by its 27 nature, involves a substantial risk’ that physical force may be used”; interpreting an 28 earlier version of the career-offender residual clause, but stating that the “result . . .

1 would be no different” under the present version of the guideline). Johnson, however,
2 removed this alternative ground of justifying Mr. Day’s Section 924(c) sentence.

3 In Johnson, the Supreme Court declared the residual clause of the ACCA to be 4 “unconstitutionally vague” because the “indeterminacy of the wide-ranging inquiry 5 required by the residual clause both denies fair notice to defendants and invites 6 arbitrary enforcement by judges.” Johnson, 135 S. Ct. at 2557. Thus, the Supreme 7 Court concluded, “[i]ncreasing a defendant’s sentence under the clause denies due 8 process of law.” Id. The Supreme Court held the residual clause “vague in all its 9 applications,” id. at 2561, and overruled its contrary decisions in James v. United 10 States, 550 U.S. 192 (2007), and Sykes v. United States, 131 S. Ct. 2267 (2011).
11 Johnson, 135 S. Ct. at 2562-63.

12 The holding in Johnson invalidating the residual clause of the ACCA applies
13 equally to the residual clause of Section 924(c). In Dimaya v. Lynch, 803 F.3d 1110
14 (9th Cir. 2015), the Ninth Circuit held that the identically worded definition of a “crime
15 of violence” in the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(43)(F), 16 is unconstitutionally vague. Dimaya, 803 F.3d at 1111. The INA defines a “crime of 17 violence” by reference to the definition in 18 U.S.C. Section 16(b). Section 16(b), like 18 Section 924(c)(3), has a force clause and a residual clause—indeed, the provisions are 19 identical. They each define “crime of violence” as:

- 20 (a) an offense that has as an element the use, attempted use, or 21 threatened use of physical force against the person or property 22 of another, or
- 23 (b) any other offense that is a felony and that, by its nature, 24 involves a substantial risk that physical force against the 25 person or property of another may be used in the course of 26 committing the offense.

27 18 U.S.C. § 16; 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(3).

1 Although the language of Section 16(b), as incorporated into the INA, is not
 2 identical to that of ACCA’s residual clause, the Ninth Circuit concluded that Section
 3 16(b) suffered from the same constitutional defects identified in Johnson, and was 4 therefore unconstitutionally vague. Dimaya, 803 F.3d at 1114-17; see also United
 5 States v. Vivas-Ceja, 808 F.3d 719, 722-23 (7th Cir. 2015) (same). Because both 6 statutes require a consideration of what kind of conduct the “ordinary case” of the 7 crime involves, and both statutes left uncertainty about the amount of risk required, the 8 Ninth Circuit reasoned that Section 16(b), like ACCA’s residual clause, produced too
 9 much unpredictability and arbitrariness to comport with due process. Dimaya, 803
 10 F.3d at 1116-17.

11 The same is true of the residual clause in Section 924(c)(3)(B), which the Ninth 12 Circuit has recognized is “identical” to Section 16(b)’s residual clause. See United 13 States v. Amparo, 68 F.3d 1222, 1226 (9th Cir. 1995); Delgado-Hernandez v. Holder, 14 697 F.3d 1125, 1130 (9th Cir. 2012). For interpretive purposes, the Ninth Circuit has 15 treated Section 16(b) as the “equivalent” of Section 924(c)(3). See United States v.
 16 Mendez, 992 F.2d 1488, 1492 (9th Cir. 1993); Amparo, 68 F.3d at 1226 (relying on 17 United States v. Aragon, 983 F.2d 1306 (4th Cir. 1993), a Section 16(b) case, to 18 interpret Section 924(c)(3)(B)). At least three district courts have squarely held that 19 Section 924(c)(3)’s residual clause is unconstitutionally vague after Johnson. See 20 United States v. Lattanaphom, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2016 WL 393545, at *3-6 (E.D. Cal.
 21 Feb. 1, 2016); United States v. Bell, 2016 WL 344749, at *12-13 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 22 2016); United States v. Edmunson, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2015 WL 9311983, at *3-5 (D.
 23 Md. Dec. 30, 2015) (as amended). This Court should likewise conclude that Section
 24 924(c)(3)(B) is unconstitutionally vague and cannot be used to support Mr. Day’s 25 Section 924(c) conviction and sentence.

26 Federal unarmed bank robbery and federal armed bank robbery categorically are 27 not crimes of violence under the force clause of Section 924(c). And Johnson
 28 eliminated the residual clause. As such, that provision can no longer serve as an

1 alternative basis upon which to hold that Mr. Day's offense is a crime of violence. In 2 short, following Johnson, Mr. Day's underlying bank robbery offense is not a crime of 3 violence for purposes of Section 924(c).³

4 B. Mr. Day Is Not a Career Offender Because Neither His Instant
 5 Conviction for Armed Bank Robbery Nor His Prior Conviction for 6 Unarmed Bank Robbery Is a Crime of Violence Under Johnson.

7 Mr. Day's instant conviction for armed bank robbery and his 1995 conviction for 8 unarmed bank robbery both contributed to the court's finding that he was a career
 9 offender. (Ex. C, Sentencing Transcript, at 32-33; PSR ¶¶ 49; 71-75.) Section 4B1.1
 10 of the Sentencing Guidelines provides for enhanced guidelines ranges where (1) the 11 defendant is 18 years or older at the time of the instant offense, (2) the instant offense is 12 a felony "crime of violence" or "controlled substance offense," and (3) the defendant
 13 has at least two prior felony convictions of either a "crime of violence" or a "controlled 14 substance offense." See USSG § 4B1.1(a). As set out in the career offender guideline, 15 the term "crime of violence" is defined as:

16 [A]ny offense under federal or state law, punishable by imprisonment for a term 17 exceeding one year, that—

 20 ³ It should be noted that bank robbery is indivisible as between "force and 21 violence" and "intimidation" because these are merely different means by which a 22 defendant can commit the offense. More specifically, the jury is not called upon to 23 parse out and unanimously agree whether the taking was (a) by force and violence or 24 (b) by intimidation. See United States v. Wright, 215 F.3d 1020, 1028 (9th Cir. 2000)
 25 ("[O]ne of the elements of the offense is a taking 'by force and violence, or by 26 intimidation.'") (quoting § 2113(a))); United States v. Alsop, 479 F.2d 65, 66 (9th Cir.
 27 1973) ("That the statute and the indictment use the disjunctive phrase 'by force and 28 violence, or by intimidation' does not mean the indictment is duplicitous. Only one offense was charged." (citation omitted)); see also Ninth Cir. Model Criminal Jury Instructions § 8.162 (2015) (stating the elements of bank robbery, which include using "force and violence or intimidation"). Because the statute is indivisible as to this required element, the modified categorical approach is inapplicable. See Descamps, 133 S. Ct. 2276 (2013); United States v. Werle, __ F.3d __, 2016 WL 828132, *4 (9th Cir. Mar. 3, 2016) ("If a statute is overinclusive and indivisible as to any required element, the modified categorical approach cannot be applied to that statute.").

- 1 (1) has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened
2 use of physical force against the person of another, or 3 (2) is burglary of a dwelling, arson, or extortion, involves use of 4 explosives, or otherwise involves conduct that presents a serious
5 potential risk of physical injury to another.

6 U.S.S.G. § 4B1.2(a). As used in this section of the brief, subsection (1) is called the 7 “force clause”; subsection (2)’s list of offenses is called the “enumerated offenses
8 clause,” and the remainder of subsection (2) is called the “residual clause.”

9 1. Neither Unarmed Bank Robbery Nor Armed Bank Robbery Is a
10 Crime of Violence Under the Residual Clause following Johnson, 11 and Neither Satisfies the Force Clause.

12 For the reasons just articulated in connection with the Section 924(c) argument, 13 Mr. Day’s instant conviction for armed bank robbery and his prior conviction for 14 unarmed bank robbery cannot serve as career-offender predicates either. Specifically, 15 following Johnson, the residual clause of the career offender guideline is 16 unconstitutionally vague. See supra, Part III.A.2.; United States v. Benavides, 617 Fed.
17 App’x 790 (9th Cir. 2015) (vacating and remanding for resentencing in light of 18 government’s concession that Johnson applies to the residual clause in the guidelines); 19 see also, e.g., United States v. Terrell, 593 F.3d 1084, 1087 n.1 (9th Cir. 2010) (internal 20 citations omitted) (stating that the ACCA’s “violent felony” definition is “nearly 21 identical” to section 4B1.2 and that the decision’s ACCA analysis “applies equally to § 22 4B1.2”); United States v. Crews, 621 F.3d 849, 852 n.4 (9th Cir. 2010) (“In the past we 23 have made no distinction between the terms ‘violent felony’ and ‘crime of violence’ for 24 purposes of interpreting the residual clause . . .”). And neither unarmed nor armed 25 bank robbery satisfies the force clause because neither requires the intentional use of 26 violent force. See supra, Part III.A.1.

1 2. The Excision of the Residual Clause Takes with It the
 2 Commentary Offense of Robbery, which Only Served to Interpret
 3 the Residual Clause.

4 The career offender designation in Mr. Day’s case cannot be salvaged under the 5 commentary either. The application notes contained in the commentary to section 6 4B1.2 include a separate list of offenses that the application notes state qualify as 7 crimes of violence. Among those offenses is “robbery.” See U.S.S.G. § 4B1.2 cmt.
 8 n.1. With the excision of the residual clause from the career offender provision, 9 however, the offenses listed only in the commentary to the guideline are no longer of 10 any effect either, because they only possibly interpreted the residual clause.

11 The Sentencing Reform Act of 1984 created the Sentencing Commission and 12 authorized it to create “guidelines . . . for use of a sentencing court in determining the 13 sentence to be imposed in a criminal case.” 28 U.S.C. § 994(a)(1). Those guidelines
 14 are submitted to Congress in advance, id. § 994(p), making the Sentencing Commission
 15 “fully accountable to Congress.” See Mistretta v. United States, 488 U.S. 361, 393-94
 16 (1989) (upholding the Sentencing Commission against a separation of powers challenge 17 on this ground).

18 Commentary, on the other hand, does not receive the same treatment as the 19 guidelines. The Sentencing Reform Act does not explicitly authorize the creation of 20 commentary. 28 U.S.C. § 994(a) (authorizing “guidelines” and “policy statements”);
 21 see also Stinson v. United States, 508 U.S. 36, 41 (1993). Nor does the Sentencing
 22 Reform Act require that commentary be submitted to Congress for approval. See 28
 23 U.S.C. § 994(p) (requiring only that amendments to guidelines be submitted to 24 Congress); Stinson, 508 U.S. at 46 (commentary “is not reviewed by Congress”). And 25 the Sentencing Commission itself has relegated commentary to a secondary, 26 interpretative role. See U.S.S.G. § 1B1.7 (explaining that the purpose of the 27 commentary is to “interpret [a] guideline or explain how it is to be applied”); United 28 States v. Anderson, 942 F.2d 606, 611 (9th Cir. 1991), abrogated on other grounds by

1 Stinson v. United States, 508 U.S. 36 (1993) (noting the Sentencing Commission’s
 2 belief that commentary “is an aid to correct interpretation of the guidelines, not a
 3 guideline itself or on a par with the guidelines themselves”). Where commentary 4 assists and amplifies the text of the guideline – and where the text of the guideline “will 5 bear the construction” the commentary offers – the commentary’s interpretation of the 6 guideline is binding. Stinson, 508 U.S. at 46. But where commentary runs afoul of the 7 Constitution or a federal statute or where it is “plainly erroneous or inconsistent” with 8 the guideline it interprets, it is the text of the guideline, not the commentary, that must 9 control. Id. at 45-47; United States v. Landa, 642 F.3d 833, 836 (9th Cir. 2011) (stating 10 if there is a potential conflict between the text and the commentary, the text controls).

11 Because commentary is solely an interpretative aid, it “does not have 12 freestanding definitional power” and only has force insofar as it interprets or explains a 13 guideline’s text. United States v. Leshen, 453 Fed. App’x 408, 413-15 (4th Cir. 2011) 14 (unpublished) (finding that prior state sex offenses did not qualify as crimes of 15 violence, despite government argument that offenses fell within the commentary); 16 accord United States v. Shell, 789 F.3d 335, 340-41 (4th Cir. 2015) (“[The government
 17 skips past the text of § 4B1.2 to focus on its commentary,” but “it is the text, of course, 18 that takes precedence.”). It follows that, if a portion of a guideline is excised, the 19 commentary that interpreted that portion of the guideline must go as well. Vestigial 20 commentary without a textual hook must be deemed “inconsistent” with the text under 21 Stinson, because its only “functional purpose” was to “assist in the interpretation and 22 application” of a rule no longer exists. Stinson, 508 U.S. at 45.

23 The only question that remains, then, is whether the term “robbery” in the 24 commentary interpreted the residual clause or whether it interpreted some portion of the 25 definition that remains intact. As a general matter, the offenses enumerated in the 26 commentary could only have been interpreting the residual clause; time and again, the 27 Ninth Circuit has held that the state offenses most closely related to those commentary
 28 offenses do not require the use of force. E.g., Quijada-Aguilar v. Lynch, 799 F.3d

1 1303, 1306-07 (9th Cir. 2015) (California voluntary manslaughter does not have an
 2 element of the use of force); Delgado-Hernandez v. Holder, 697 F.3d 1125, 1127 (9th
 3 Cir. 2012) (California kidnapping does not require an element of force); United States
 4 v. Williams, 110 F.3d 50, 52 (9th Cir. 1997) (Oregon kidnapping does not require an 5 element of use of force); see also James v. United States, 550 U.S. 192, 206 (2007)
 6 (holding that attempt was appropriately included in the commentary enumerated 7 offenses, “based on the Commission’s review of empirical sentencing data [which] 8 presumably reflects an assessment that attempt crimes often pose a similar risk of 9 injury as completed offenses”). It cannot be said, then, that the commentary offenses 10 are there to “assist in the interpretation of” the force clause—the inclusion of those 11 offenses is quite inconsistent with the text of the force clause.

12 Of all of the offenses listed in the commentary, robbery has perhaps the strongest 13 tie to the residual clause. The Ninth Circuit’s generic definition of robbery is tied to the 14 risk of harm to the person, not to any element of force. United States v. Becerril-Lopez, 15 541 F.3d 881, 891 (9th Cir. 2008) (defining generic robbery as “aggravated larceny,
 16 containing at least the elements of misappropriation of property under circumstances
 17 involving immediate danger to the person”) (emphasis added); see also Leshen, 453
 18 Fed. Appx. at 415 (noting that the generic term “robbery” in the commentary 19 interpreted the residual clause of the career offender guideline). Indeed, as noted, Ninth 20 Circuit precedents have generally tied state robbery statutes to the residual clause of 21 various crime-of-violence definitions. Prince, 772 F.3d at 1176 (finding that California
 22 second degree robbery is a violent felony under the residual clause of the Armed Career
 23 Criminal Act, because it “certainly” is the kind of crime that presents a serious potential
 24 risk of physical injury to another); Chandler, 743 F.3d at 652-55 (Nevada conspiracy to 25 commit robbery is a violent felony under the residual clause), remanded pursuant to 26 Johnson, 743 F.3d 648 (9th Cir. 2015); see also McDougherty, 920 F.2d at 574 & n.3
 27 (“Clearly then, robbery as defined in California falls under 18 U.S.C. 16(b) as a felony 28 that ‘by its nature, involves a substantial risk’ that physical force may be used”;

1 interpreting an earlier version of the career-offender residual clause, but stating that the 2 “result . . . would be no different” under the present version of the guideline).

3 On the flip side, it is equally clear that the majority of Ninth Circuit state robbery
 4 statutes are not crimes of violence under the force clause. See Dixon, 805 F.3d at 1197
 5 (California robbery does not satisfy the force clause); United States v. Alvarado-
 6 Pineda, 774 F.3d 1198 (9th Cir. 2014) (suggesting, without deciding, that Washington
 7 robbery might not be a crime of violence under the similarly worded force clause of 18
 8 U.S.C. § 16(a), because the statute required “any force or threat, no matter how 9 slight”); United States v. Dunlap, ____ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2016 WL 591757, at *4-6 (D.
 10 Or. 2016) (Oregon robbery is not a crime of violence under the force clause).

11 Against this background, it is clear that the commentary’s reference to robbery
 12 could only have interpreted the residual clause, i.e., as an example of a type of crime
 13 that entails “a serious potential risk of physical injury to another.” With the residual 14 clause excised from the guideline, the commentary no longer serves to interpret or 15 amplify any provision of the remaining text, but, instead, is a contrary and plainly 16 erroneous interpretation of what remains. Once the residual clause is gone, the 17 commentary offenses—and especially robbery—must go as well.

18 The First Circuit has already reached this conclusion post-Johnson, holding that 19 the list of enumerated offenses contained in the guidelines commentary was 20 interpreting only the residual clause, and that post-Johnson, such commentary is no
 21 longer of any effect. As the Court stated, “once shorn of the residual clause § 4B1.2(a)
 22 sets forth a limited universe of specific offenses that qualify as a ‘crime of violence.’
 23 There is simply no mechanism or textual hook in the Guideline that allows us to import 24 offenses not specifically listed therein into 4B1.2(a)’s definition of ‘crime of 25 violence.’” See United States v. Soto-Rivera, 811 F.3d 53, 60 (1st Cir. 2016). This 26 holding is in line with the interpretation many Circuits had given to the career-offender
 27 commentary even before Johnson. See Shell, 789 F.3d at 345 (finding that a state
 28 statute that did not meet the requirements of the text of § 4B1.2 could not be saved on

1 the grounds that it might fall under one of the commentary's list of offenses, noting that 2 the commentary serves "only to amplify that definition, and any inconsistency between 3 the two [must be] resolved in favor of the text" (citing Stinson, 508 U.S. at 43); United
4 States v. Armijo, 651 F.3d 1226, 1234-37 (10th Cir. 2011) (rejecting the government's 5 argument that Colorado manslaughter qualifies as a crime of violence simply because it
6 is listed in the commentary and need not qualify under the definitions set out in the text;
7 "[t]o read application note 1 as encompassing non-intentional crimes would render it
8 utterly inconsistent with the language of § 4B1.2(a)"); see also United States v. Serna, 9 309 F.3d 859, 862 & n.6 (5th Cir. 2002) (possession of a sawed-off shotgun, while 10 listed in the commentary, must satisfy one of the definitions in the text). This Court 11 should do so as well.

12 Neither unarmed bank robbery or armed bank robbery is categorically a crime of 13 violence under any provision of the text of Section 4B1.2, and commentary cannot be 14 used to expand the definition of crime of violence beyond what the text will bear. As 15 such, it cannot serve as an alternative basis to hold that Mr. Day's convictions are 16 crimes of violence. In short, neither Mr. Day's instant conviction under 18 U.S.C. §
17 2113(a), (d) nor his 1995 conviction under 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a) is a crime of violence
18 for career offender purposes. Mr. Day must be resentenced without the career offender 19 designation.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, Mr. Day's sentence was "imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States," and is "in excess of the maximum authorized by law." Mr. Day is entitled to Section 2255 relief and should be resentenced under the non-career-offender guideline and without a mandatory consecutive sentence for a violation of Section 924(c).

14 MR. NEWMAN: It is. It's something that we do as a 15 support group for the school a couple times a year and it's 16 something that I'm active in.

17 THE COURT: How old is this child?

18 MR. NEWMAN: Eight.

19 THE COURT: That's priority. Unless there are 20 compelling circumstances, I understand why. No problem.

21 MR. MAYOCK: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Michael
22 Mayock with Mr. Montez Day.

23 THE COURT: Nice to see you Mr. Mayock. We were 24 colleagues in the U.S. attorney's office. You should know that.
25 We're here for a change of plea to a single indictment in which

1 Mr. Bell and Mr. Day are both named as defendants; is that 2 correct?

3 MR. NEWMAN: Correct.

4 MR. MAYOCK: Correct, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Is there a plea agreement for one but not 6 for the other?

7 MR. BROWN: Yes, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Is there any reason there can't be 9 reference to that agreement?

10 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: The plea agreement for Mr. Bell refers to 12 Counts 2 and 3. To which count or counts is Mr. Day intending 13 to change his plea?

14 MR. BROWN: One, two and three.

15 THE COURT: All three. Is that correct, all three?

16 MR. BROWN: Yes, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Let me address my remarks to Mr. Day
18 and Mr. Bell for a second. This procedure of changing a plea
19 and entering a guilty plea is elaborate. Certain things have to 20 be dealt with. A certain format has to be followed. I'm going 21 to explain it.

22 I need your cooperation and I need your careful
23 attention. I will be asking each of you a number of questions.
24 But at some point in the proceedings I will be telling both of 25 you the identical thing such as what rights you have that you

1 will be giving up.

2 To save time I will say certain things once that apply
3 to both and then I will ask each of you separately whether you
4 enter that plea. If either of you, once you talk to your 5 respective lawyers or raise a question with me or otherwise
6 pause in what we're doing, just let me know and you will have a
7 right to do that. But otherwise work with me. Please be very
8 attentive because I want to make sure you know what you're doing
9 and the consequences to you of what you are planning to do.

10 Is that understood by both of you? Mr. Bell?

11 DEFENDANT BELL: Right.

13 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: The first thing to remember is that you can 15 change your mind before we get to the finish line. And by the 16 finish line, I don't mean to minimize the importance of what 17 we're doing with these changes of plea being accepted and 18 entered. Once that happens there is no going back on that. You
19 will be found guilty and what will remain will be sentencing
20 basically. So until we get there, you have a right to change
21 your mind. But it may be something that you have already 22 committed to do and that's fine also.

23 At the outset I'm going to ask the clerk to swear each
24 of you in. She'll ask you preliminary questions and then I will 25 turn to the questions and the advice of rights that I will be

1 giving to each of you.

2 THE CLERK: Mr. Bell, is Bruce Bell your true and full
3 name?

4 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes, it is.

5 THE CLERK: It has been indicated that you wish to
6 withdraw your previously entered pleas of not guilty to Counts 2
7 and 3 of the indictment and tender a different plea. Do you now
8 withdraw your previously entered plea of not guilty to Counts 2
9 and 3 of the indictment?

10 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

11 THE CLERK: How do you now plead to the indictment
12 filed against you, guilty or not guilty?

13 DEFENDANT BELL: Guilty.

14 THE CLERK: How do you now plead to Count 3 of the 15 indictment, guilty or not guilty?

16 DEFENDANT BELL: Guilty.

17 THE CLERK: Mr. Day, is Montez Day your true and full
18 name?

19 THE DEFENDANT: Yes.

20 THE CLERK: It has been indicated that you wish to
21 withdraw your previously entered pleas of not guilty to Counts
22 1, 2 and 3 of the indictment and enter a different plea. Do you 23 now withdraw your previously entered plea of not guilty to 24 Counts 1, 2 and 3 of the indictment?

25 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

1 THE CLERK: How do you now plead to Count 1 of the
2 indictment filed against you, guilty or not guilty?

3 DEFENDANT DAY: Guilty.

4 THE CLERK: How do you now plead to Count 2, guilty or
5 not guilty?

6 DEFENDANT DAY: Guilty.

7 THE CLERK: How do you now plead to Count 3, guilty or
8 not guilty?

9 DEFENDANT DAY: Guilty.

10 THE CLERK: The court will ask you the nature of your
11 pleas under oath. Would each of you please raise your right 12 hand to be sworn.

13 (DEFENDANTS SWORN)

14 THE COURT: Okay. Let me start with you, Mr. Bell.
15 Tell me how you're feeling right now.

16 DEFENDANT BELL: How do I feel? I feel all right.

17 THE COURT: Are you dealing with any physical or 18 emotional illnesses or conditions that might affect your ability
19 to make a decision, a sensibly formed decision?

20 DEFENDANT DAY: No.

21 THE COURT: Are you under any treatment for any 22 condition today?

23 DEFENDANT BELL: No, I'm not.

24 THE COURT: Any illness?

25 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

1 THE COURT: Have you taken any medicines or drugs
2 today?

3 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

4 THE COURT: Alcoholic beverages?

5 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

6 THE COURT: Are you currently under any doctor's care?

7 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

8 THE COURT: Tell me please what your age is.

9 DEFENDANT BELL: 46.

10 THE COURT: And your level of education?

11 DEFENDANT BELL: High school.

12 THE COURT: High school?

13 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

14 THE COURT: Did you finish?

15 THE DEFENDANT: I got a G.E.D.

16 THE COURT: Have you been under psychiatric care of any 17 kind?

18 DEFENDANT BELL: No, I haven't.

19 THE COURT: Are you a citizen of the United States?

20 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

21 THE COURT: Okay. Now I'm going to ask the same
22 questions to you, Mr. Day. Then I will turn to some things that 23 apply to both of you.

24 How are you feeling today?

25 DEFENDANT DAY: I'm feeling okay.

1 THE COURT: Have you taken any medicines or drugs
2 today?

3 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

4 THE COURT: Any alcoholic beverages or any other kind
5 of drug?

6 DEFENDANT DAY: No, sir.

7 THE COURT: Are you under any doctor's care today?

8 DEFENDANT DAY: No, sir.

9 THE COURT: Please tell me your age.

10 DEFENDANT DAY: 28.

11 THE COURT: And your level of education?

12 DEFENDANT DAY: G.E.D., pre-college.

13 THE COURT: Have you been under any psychiatric or 14 psychological care?

15 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Are you currently receiving psychological
17 or psychiatric care?

18 DEFENDANT DAY: No.

19 THE COURT: Do you feel you're in condition and a 20 position today to understand what is going on?

21 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

22 THE COURT: Are you also a citizen of the United 23 States?

24 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Bell, did you receive a copy of

1 the indictment?

2 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes, I have.

3 THE COURT: Did you also, Mr. Day?

4 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, sir.

5 THE COURT: Mr. Bell, did you read it?

6 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

7 THE COURT: Did you read it, Mr. Day?

8 DEFENDANT DAY: I did, yes.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Do you each believe that you
10 understand the charges that are in that indictment? First you,
11 Mr. Bell.

14 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

15 THE COURT: Let me tell you now collectively, jointly,
16 each of you, certain things which I think you already know and 17 in the case of Mr. Bell which are actually placed in writing in 18 the plea agreement. These are rights that you will be giving
19 up. They were mentioned I think in the arraignment when you
20 were first arraigned on these charges. But it's important that 21 you understand these are your rights.

22 By pleading guilty, with the exception of the right to 23 counsel, you will be giving up these rights. Each time I
24 mention a right, I will ask you in turn whether you wish to give 25 it up. So let me begin.

1 You each have a constitutional right to a speedy and
2 public trial by jury. Do you wish to give up that right,

4 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

5 THE COURT: Do you, Mr. Day?

6 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

7 THE COURT: You each have a right to be presumed 8 innocent and to have the burden shifted to the government to 9 prove you guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Neither of you has 10 to prove yourself innocent. The burden is always upon the 11 government.

13 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

15 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Each of you, if you went to trial, would 17 have the right to see and examine the evidence and to 18 cross-examine the witnesses. Do you wish to give up that right,
19 Mr. Bell?

20 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

21 THE COURT: Do you, Mr. Day?

22 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

23 THE COURT: At all times you would have the right
24 against self incrimination. And as I think you undoubtedly 25 know, that means the right to refuse to testify. No one can

1 compel you to give information that may hurt you. You could
2 always remain silent. Do you wish to give up that right?

4 THE COURT: Do you, Mr. Day?

5 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

6 THE COURT: The other side of the coin is true also.
7 If you do take the case to trial, each of you could choose to 8 testify, go up to the witness stand and give your versions of 9 the facts and ask the jury to accept your view. Do you wish to 10 give up that right, Mr. Bell?

12 THE COURT: Do you, Mr. Day?

13 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, sir.

14 THE COURT: You could also, if the case went to trial, 15 use the subpoena power of the court to compel other witnesses to 16 come to court and if they were in a position to do so, to 17 testify on your behalf. Did you wish to give up that right,
18 Mr. Bell?

20 THE COURT: Do you, Mr. Day?

21 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

22 THE COURT: If you took the case to trial and were 23 found guilty, you could appeal the verdict of guilt. But if you
24 plead guilty, you won't be able to do that. Do you understand 25 that?

1 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

2 THE COURT: Are you willing to give up that right?

3 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

4 THE COURT: And you, Mr. Day?

5 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

6 THE COURT: Each of you will continue to have the right
7 to counsel and if you can't afford counsel to have counsel
8 appointed at the public's expense to continue to represent you.

9 Mr. Newman, is it your intention to continue to 10 represent Mr. Bell?

11 MR. NEWMAN: It is, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: Mr. Mayock?

13 MR. MAYOCK: Yes, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Okay. Those are rights that neither of you 15 will lose. Until the completion of this case and through the 16 point of sentencing, each of you will continue to enjoy that 17 right to effective counsel.

18 Now both of you being citizens, and I don't know
19 anything about your background so some of this may apply, maybe 20 not, but I want you to understand by pleading guilty to those 21 charges you are more likely than not going to lose certain civil 22 rights that citizens otherwise enjoy: The right to vote, the 23 right to run for public office, the right to serve on a jury,
24 the right to purchase and possess firearms. You will be giving 25 up all those rights.

1 Do you wish to do that, Mr. Bell?

2 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

3 THE COURT: Do you, Mr. Day?

4 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

5 THE COURT: Does either of you have any questions about 6 the rights that I just spelled out for you?

7 DEFENDANT BELL: No, sir.

8 DEFENDANT DAY: No, sir.

9 THE COURT: Do you understand, Mr. Bell, that each of 10 the two counts to which you're pleading guilty is a felony, 11 separate felony?

12 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

13 THE COURT: All the three counts you're pleading guilty
14 to, Mr. Day, those are felonies too. Do you understand that?

15 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Okay. Now I'm going to ask that Mr. Brown
17 set forth first the elements of these offenses. I'm going to 18 summarize the offenses as paraphrased in the indictment. I'm 19 going to ask Mr. Brown to summarize what the elements are, what 20 the government would have to prove.

21 I will ask him to do it for all three counts. And then
22 I will address each of you. Then I will go back to you, Mr.
23 Brown, and ask you to summarize what the evidence would be,
24 first against Mr. Bell and then against Mr. Day.

25 Now the indictment in case Number 99-123 is only a

1 single indictment. It wasn't superseding, was it?

2 MR. BROWN: That's correct, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Okay. In Count 1 the indictment alleges
4 violation of 18 USC Section 371, conspiracy to commit a bank
5 robbery. This is particularly applicable to you, Mr. Day,
6 because you're pleading guilty to that count.

7 It says beginning on or before January 22 of this year,
8 1999, and continuing to on or about January 26 of '99, both you
9 and Mr. Bell and others known and unknown to the grand jury
10 conspired and agreed with each other to commit a bank robbery of 11 Home Savings in San Fernando, California.

12 On Page 2 it describes the means by which this 13 agreement, this conspiracy was to be accomplished and it sets
14 forth eight ways in which the object of the conspiracy was to be 15 accomplished. It claims that both defendants would obtain a 16 stolen van to use as a preliminary getaway vehicle; that both
17 defendants would park illegally a Ford Expedition a distance
18 from Home Savings for use as a secondary getaway vehicle.

19 That both defendants would drive to Home Savings in the 20 stolen van. They would enter Home Savings brandishing guns, 21 handguns, would order the employees and customers inside to get 22 down on the floor. Both defendants would order the manager of 23 Home Savings to open the bank vault and then they would flee
24 from Home Savings in a stolen van. After that it's alleged that 25 both defendants would switch from the stolen van to the Ford

1 Expedition and drive the Ford Expedition to a safe place and 2 divide the money.

3 The first counts also alleges that they commit various 4 fraudulent and overt acts to carry out this plan. And they
5 include driving a stolen getaway van to Home Savings. That's 6 something that's alleged as to both defendants. Both defendants
7 entering the bank wearing masks and hand gloves and brandishing
8 a revolver, semi-automatic handgun. Both defendants forced the 9 employees to open the vault and give them over $85,000.

10 And I'm going to focus on the ones you're specifically
11 mentioned in Mr. Bell -- excuse me, Mr. Day. Both defendants
12 fled Home Savings in the stolen getaway van. One of the 13 defendants -- actually I should mention this -- told by the 14 assistant manager that she was sorry she put a dye pack in with 15 the stolen money and prevented her from exiting the bank by 16 grabbing her hair and pulling her back.

17 Attention now to you, Mr. Day, drove the Ford
18 Expedition to avoid the police and you stopped the Ford
19 Expedition at a mail - so defendants could hide themselves from 20 the view of a helicopter, police helicopter, and from pursuing 21 police officers. All of that is spelled out in the first count.

22 The second count says that 18 USC Section 2113,
23 Subsections A and D was violated in that both defendants by 24 force, violence, intimidation knowingly took from a person
25 approximately $85,600 belonging to Home Savings, San Fernando

1 branch, Home Savings then insured by the FDIC, Federal Deposit
2 Insurance Corporation; that both defendants assaulted and put in 3 jeopardy the life of the victim assistant manager and others by 4 using a handgun.

5 Finally the third count says that both defendants
6 violated 18 USC Section 924(c) by knowingly using and carrying a 7 firearm, namely a loaded .38 caliber revolver during the 8 commission of A crime of violence of robbing Home Savings.

9 Now Mr. Brown, would you as to Count 1, just stop after 10 you do it for Count 1, describe what the elements of the offense
11 of conspiracy in violation 18 USC 371 would be.

12 MR. BROWN: In order for defendant Day to be proved
13 guilty of conspiracy, he must have, on or about the dates
14 charged in the indictment, agreed with another person to commit
15 the bank robbery. Second, he must have become a member of the 16 conspiracy knowing of its object and intending to help
17 accomplish it.

18 And third, at least one of the members of the 19 conspiracy must have performed at least one overt act for the 20 purpose of carrying out the conspiracy.

21 THE COURT: Now again, in order to make this clear and 22 simple, I would appreciate it if you would turn to, Mr. Brown,
23 only focusing on Count 1 and only as to Mr. Day and summarize 24 what the evidence would be that the government would introduce 25 before the jury.

1 MR. BROWN: The government would prove that on or about
2 January 22nd, 1999, the day on which the getaway van was stolen,
3 and continuing through January 26th, 1999, the date on which the 4 bank robbery was committed in Los Angeles County, defendant
5 Montez Day agreed with defendant Bruce Bell to commit an armed
6 takeover robbery of Home Savings of America in San Fernando,
7 California, the deposits of which were then insured by the 8 Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

9 THE COURT: Mr. Day, I have asked the prosecutor to 10 focus only on Count 1 because that's a count that you are 11 planning to change your plea to. Did you hear what he said?

12 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

13 THE COURT: Did you understand it?

14 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, sir.

15 THE COURT: So what he did was describe technically 16 what has to be proven to convict someone of conspiracy. He 17 summarized what the government would introduce --

18 MR. BROWN: Your Honor, I omitted one element. The 19 government would show that the overt act occurred and that is 20 established by the defendants entering the bank.

21 THE COURT: Do you have -- would you be putting on 22 witnesses, eyewitnesses?

23 MR. BROWN: Yes, Your Honor. And surveillance photos.

24 THE COURT: Did the eyewitnesses identify these 25 defendants through lineups or through pictures?

1 MR. BROWN: No, they were wearing masks. The 2 identifications would have been made based on clothing and
3 witnesses seeing the defendants fleeing and the police following
4 them until their vehicle was stopped. The stolen van was found
5 and one of the weapons was later found.

6 THE COURT: Is it correct that each of the defendants
7 was caught and arrested shortly after they fled the bank?

8 MR. BROWN: Yes, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: In possession of the money?

10 MR. BROWN: Yes, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Let's focus back on you, Mr. Day. Do you
12 agree with what the prosecutor said as far as the summary of the 13 proof that he would introduce? Let me explain what the question
14 is. It may be the question wasn't very clear.

15 In order for this proceeding to be conducted properly,
16 the record has to show that there's a factual basis. It's not 17 enough for someone to come in and say I plead guilty, I want to 18 get the benefit of whatever deal or whatever impact pleading
19 guilty may be to the person that's done what he's accused of.

20 I asked Mr. Brown to summarize what the evidence would 21 be hoping that you would listen to it and be able to tell me
22 whether in fact you would agree that those are things that 23 happened. If you do agree, if you did the things that he's 24 talking about, then the record will show a factual basis and I
25 will be entitled to accept your guilty plea. Does that help you

1 understand what I'm driving at?

2 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

3 THE COURT: Do you agree with what Mr. Brown said?

4 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

5 THE COURT: Did you in fact do those things?

6 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Now Mr. Brown, do the same thing,
8 but this is going to apply to both Mr. Bell and Mr. Day.
9 They're both planning to plead to each of Counts 2 and 3. So
10 set forth what the elements of Count 2 are and what the evidence 11 would be.

12 MR. BROWN: In order to be guilty of armed bank
13 robbery, the defendant must have taken from a teller money
14 belonging to a bank. The defendant must have used force and 15 violence or intimidation in doing so. The deposits of the bank
16 must have been insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance
17 Corporation at that time. And finally, the defendant must have 18 intentionally made a show of force that caused the teller to 19 fear bodily harm by using a dangerous weapon.

20 If this case went to trial, the government would prove 21 that defendants Bruce Bell and Montez Day entered the Home
22 Savings of America in San Fernando, California on January 26th,
23 1999 and that defendant Montez Day brandished a semi-automatic
24 pistol while defendant Bruce Bell brandished a loaded .38
25 caliber revolver. Defendants Montez Day and Bruce Bell forced

1 the assistant manager Elizabeth Aguillon to open the bank vault
2 and took from the bank vault approximately $85,600 in cash.

3 THE COURT: Mr. Bell, do you understand what Mr. Brown
4 said?

5 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

6 THE COURT: Did you in fact do the things he just 7 described?

8 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

9 THE COURT: How about you, Mr. Day, do you understand
10 what he said?

11 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

12 THE COURT: Did you do those things?

13 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

14 THE COURT: Let me hear Count 3, Mr. Brown. Summarize
15 what the elements are and what the evidence would be, please.

16 MR. BROWN: In order to be guilty of using or carrying 17 a firearm during a crime of violence, the following must be 18 true. One, defendant committed the crime of violence charged in 19 the indictment, bank robbery in this case; two, the defendant
20 knowingly used or carried a firearm; three, defendant used or 21 carried the firearm during and in relation to the crime of 22 violence.

23 Because the 924 (c) charge in this case carries a 24 mandatory minimum sentence of seven years, the government would 25 also have to prove the defendant brandished the firearm.

1 Now Your Honor, because the firearm charged was only
2 possessed by defendant Bell and the government is relying on 3 Pinkerton liability as to defendant Day for that firearm, I'd 4 also like to put on the record the elements of Pinkerton
5 liability.

6 THE COURT: I want Mr. Day to pay attention to this.
7 Is it an accurate way of paraphrasing what you're about to do,
8 Mr. Brown, that you're saying the indictment singles out only
9 the weapon that Mr. Bell actually carried, but that you have a
10 basis to obtain a conviction of guilt as to Mr. Day?

11 MR. BROWN: That's correct, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: It's a legal basis called Pinkerton?

13 MR. BROWN: Yes. In order, if you have a criminal 14 agreement with somebody to commit an act, there are certain
15 instances in which you will be liable for the crime, the acts
16 committed by the person you're conspiring with. That is called 17 Pinkerton liability. And if the acts of your partner in crime
18 are reasonably foreseeable and a necessary and natural 19 consequence of your criminal agreement, you will be liable for

21 THE COURT: Yes.

22 MR. BROWN: In order for the defendant to be guilty of 23 a crime committed by his co-conspirator, the following must be 24 true. One, defendant's co-conspirator committed a crime such as 25 a bank robbery; two, that the co-conspirator was a member of the

1 conspiracy charged in Count 1 of the indictment; three, that the 2 co-conspirator committed the crime in furtherance of the 3 conspiracy; four, defendant was a member of the conspiracy on 4 the date that the co-conspirator committed the crime; and five,
5 the crime fell within the scope of the conspiracy and could 6 reasonably have been foreseen to be a necessary and natural
7 consequence of the conspiracy.

8 Shall I proceed with the factual basis, Your Honor?

9 THE COURT: Yes.

10 MR. BROWN: On January 26, 1999, defendants Bruce Bell
11 and Montez Day entered the Home Savings of America in San 12 Fernando which was then insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance
13 Corporation. Bruce Bell brandished a loaded .38 caliber
14 revolver. Bruce Bell's brandishing of a .38 caliber revolver
15 was within the scope of Montez Day and Bruce Bell's unlawful 16 agreement and could reasonably have been foreseen by defendant
17 Montez Day as a necessary and natural consequence of that 18 agreement. And the defendants used that weapon in order to rob
19 the bank on that day.

20 THE COURT: Okay. I want to turn to you first, 21 Mr. Day. There were a lot words Mr. Brown used. Were you able 22 to understand what he was saying as to why you could be found
23 guilty of what Mr. Bell did as to his .38 caliber revolver?

24 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Bell, did you do the things that

1 Mr. Brown referred to in connection with Count 3 relating to the 2 use of a firearm?

3 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

4 THE COURT: Did you, Mr. Day?

5 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

6 THE COURT: All right. And I want to address some
7 questions next to you, Mr. Bell, because I have been informed
8 and have been given a copy of the plea agreement. And do you
9 have this with you, Mr. Newman?

10 MR. NEWMAN: I do, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Would you turn to Page 8, please.

12 Mr. Bell, on Page 8 is that your signature?

13 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes, it is.

14 THE COURT: Did you sign that agreement in the presence
15 of Mr. Newman?

16 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

17 THE COURT: Before you signed it, did you read it?

18 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

19 THE COURT: Did you understand it?

20 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

21 THE COURT: As far as you're concerned, does this plea
22 agreement contain the entire terms of the agreement between you
23 on the one hand and the U.S. attorney's office on the other?

24 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

25 THE COURT: Has anyone made you any promises or

1 representations of guarantees other than whatever may be set
2 forth in this plea agreement?

3 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

4 THE COURT: Has anyone made any threats to you that 5 prompted you to plead guilty this afternoon?

6 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

7 THE COURT: Did anyone tell you about or promise to you
8 what specific sentence would be imposed?

9 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

10 THE COURT: Do you have any other agreement with the 11 government besides what is now in your hands as a written plea
12 agreement?

13 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

14 THE COURT: Did anyone promise you any leniency or 15 probation or any kind of outcome once the day of sentencing 16 comes?

17 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

18 THE COURT: Are you presently on parole?
19 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

20 THE COURT: Have you discussed with your lawyer the 21 impact on your parole of being found guilty today, the impact on 22 the offense for which you're on parole?

23 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

24 THE COURT: Are you involved in any court proceedings?

25 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

1 THE COURT: Have you been advised of the maximum
2 penalty under the law?

3 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes, I have.

4 THE COURT: For these offenses, at least for Count 3,
5 there's also a minimum penalty; is that correct?

6 MR. BROWN: Yes, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Both of you should listen because I'm now
8 going to ask Mr. Brown to place on the record both the maximum 9 and minimum penalties.

10 MR. BROWN: The maximum penalty for the conspiracy
11 count, Count 1, is five years imprisonment, a three-year period
12 of supervised release, a fine of $250,000 and a mandatory
13 special assessment of $100.

14 The maximum sentence the court could impose for the 15 armed bank robbery, Count 2, is 25 years imprisonment, a
16 five-year period of supervised release, a fine of $250,000 and a
17 mandatory special assessment of $100.

18 The statutory maximum sentence the court could impose
19 for violation of 924(c), the third count, is life imprisonment, 20 a five-year period of supervised release, a fine of $250,000 and 21 a mandatory special assessment of $100.

22 The statutory mandatory minimum sentence that the court
23 must impose for Count 3 and the 924(c) charge is a seven-year
24 term which must run consecutive to any other sentence of 25 imprisonment. Therefore, the total maximum sentence for all of

1 these offenses to which defendant Montez Day is pleading guilty
2 is life imprisonment, a five-year period of supervised release,
3 a fine of $750,000 and a mandatory special assessment of $300.

4 The maximum total sentence for the two offenses to 5 which defendant Bruce Bell is pleading guilty is life
6 imprisonment, a five-year period of supervised release, a fine
7 of $500,000 and a mandatory special assessment of $200.

8 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Bell, continuing with you for a
9 moment. You've heard some reference to supervised release.
10 This is something that applies to both of you. Do you both
11 understand that in the federal system there's no longer such a 12 thing as parole? If someone sentenced to prison serves out the 13 term of sentence except for the reduction that may be earned for 14 good time or good behavior and then when that person is released
15 from prison he may be subjected to something called supervised
16 release which is basically supervision that has conditions,
17 restrictions, terms and limitations. If a person violates the 18 terms of his supervised release, he can be sent back to prison
19 for the entire amount of the period of supervised release.

20 Do you understand that, Mr. Bell?

21 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes, I do.

22 THE COURT: Do you understand that, Mr. Day?

23 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, sir.

24 THE COURT: Now there's also been some reference at 25 least in the plea agreement I think and perhaps there's

1 something been said today about the Sentencing Commission
2 guidelines. I want to tell you both about those. There will be
3 some things you and I will talk about directly with you in a
4 minute, Mr. Day. I will be getting to you as well, Mr. Bell.

5 Now this again applies to both of you. Under the 6 federal system that you're now part of there are sentencing
7 guidelines which are issued by something called the Sentencing
8 Commission. They contain an analysis of the relevant facts and 9 those include the nature of the offense, the criminal history of 10 the defendant, whether the defendant accepted responsibility for 11 what he was accused of, whether in the alternative he obstructed
12 justice; a lot of factors. They are all taken into account by 13 the probation office.

14 The probation office applies these guidelines issued by 15 the commission and comes up with a guideline range expressed in 16 months, how many months can the defendant be sentenced. The low 17 end and the high end are included. But I'm not bound by these 18 guideline determinations. Under certain circumstances I impose
19 a tougher sentence; a longer sentence, or I can impose a shorter
20 sentence. You each will get through your lawyers and directly 21 in your own right a copy of the presentence report which is 22 prepared by the probation office and which deals with these 23 guidelines.

24 Each of you through your lawyer will have a chance to 25 challenge it or add to it or change it. It eventually comes to

1 me and then I will review it. But I again want to make sure you
2 each understand that I'm not bound by it.

3 Do you understand that, Mr. Bell?

4 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes, sir.

5 THE COURT: Are there any questions you have at the 6 moment about what I have said about the sentencing guidelines?

7 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

8 THE COURT: Mr. Day, do you understand what I said
9 about the guidelines?

10 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, sir.

11 THE COURT: Do you have any questions about those 12 guidelines?

13 DEFENDANT DAY: No, sir.

14 THE COURT: Okay. Now Mr. Brown, in the plea agreement
15 from Mr. Bell is there any provision relating to appeal?

16 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Okay. And there's no agreement restricting
18 Mr. Day; is that correct, Mr. Mayock?

19 MR. MAYOCK: That's correct, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Each of you needs to understand that when I
21 finally do impose sentence, if we get to that point, if I'm 22 wrong you can appeal what I did. You may file your appeal
23 through your lawyer, challenge the sentence, not the finding of 24 guilty, not the guilty verdict, but the sentence.

25 Do you understand that, Mr. Bell?

1 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes, sir.

2 THE COURT: Do you, Mr. Day?

3 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, sir.

4 THE COURT: Okay. Turning to you for a minute,
5 Mr. Bell, have you had sufficient time to discuss this case with 6 Mr. Newman?

7 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

8 THE COURT: Are you satisfied that he's fully 9 considered any defenses you might have to the charges?

10 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes, I am.

11 THE COURT: Are you satisfied with his representation
12 of you?

13 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

14 THE COURT: Has he advised you of the nature of these 15 charges and how the factors that go into the sentence generally 16 work?

17 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

18 THE COURT: Have you told him all the facts and 19 circumstances surrounding this case?

20 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

21 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Day, same question. I'm asking
22 now a few questions about Mr. Mayock. Have you had a sufficient
23 opportunity to discuss this case with him?

24 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

25 THE COURT: Are you satisfied with his representation

1 of you?

2 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

3 THE COURT: Has he told about any defenses you might 4 have to these charges?

5 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

6 THE COURT: Has he explained the nature of the 7 charges?

8 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

9 THE COURT: Has he explained how the sentencing process
10 works in general?

11 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

12 THE COURT: Have you given him all the facts that 13 you're aware of that he would need to know to figure out what is 14 in your best interest?

15 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Continuing with you for a moment, Mr. Day,
17 there is no plea agreement that I'm aware of. But I want to 18 make sure you tell me whether anyone has made you any promises
19 or representations, guarantees or other statements about what 20 will happen to you at the time of sentencing.

21 DEFENDANT DAY: No.

22 THE COURT: Has anyone made any threats to you or to 23 any member of your family that prompts you to plead guilty this 24 afternoon?

25 DEFENDANT DAY: No, sir.

1 THE COURT: Has anyone made you any promises of 2 leniency?

3 DEFENDANT DAY: No, sir.

4 THE COURT: No one has told you what specific sentence
5 the court will impose; is that correct?

6 DEFENDANT DAY: That's correct, sir.

7 THE COURT: Are you presently on parole?

8 DEFENDANT DAY: No. I'm on supervised release, sir.

9 THE COURT: From an earlier federal offense?

10 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes, sir.

11 THE COURT: Are you aware of the consequences for 12 pleading guilty today in terms of what happens on that other
13 previous federal case?

14 DEFENDANT DAY: I'm aware of the consequences, yes.

15 THE COURT: Mr. Bell, do you feel that you understand
16 everything that's taking place here this afternoon?

17 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

18 THE COURT: Do you know of any reason why I shouldn't
19 accept your guilty plea?

20 DEFENDANT BELL: No.

21 THE COURT: Do you understand then that all that's left
22 in your case if I do accept the plea is for sentence to be 23 imposed?

24 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

25 THE COURT: And is your decision to plead guilty this

1 afternoon to Counts 2 and 3 entirely free and voluntary?

2 DEFENDANT BELL: Yes.

3 THE COURT: Mr. Day, I'm going to ask you the same
4 questions. Do you think you understand everything that's been 5 going on here today?

6 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

7 THE COURT: Do you know of any reason why I shouldn't
8 accept your guilty plea?

9 DEFENDANT DAY: No.

10 THE COURT: Then do you understand that all that will 11 be left in this case is for sentence to be imposed?

12 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

13 THE COURT: Is it still your desire to plead guilty
14 notwithstanding everything that I have tried to explain to you?

15 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Mr. Newman, there are a few questions I
17 would like to address to you. Through your representation of 18 Mr. Bell, has he been able to cooperate with you in a competent 19 fashion?

20 MR. NEWMAN: Yes, Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: Did you sign the plea agreement in his 22 presence?

23 MR. NEWMAN: I did, Your Honor.

24 THE COURT: Did you discuss it with him before he and 25 you signed it?

1 MR. NEWMAN: Yes, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Does this plea agreement that Mr. Bell
3 entered into represent the entire disposition of his case?

4 MR. NEWMAN: It does, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Did anyone make any promises,
6 representations or guarantees to you that prompted you to 7 recommend that Mr. Bell plead guilty?

8 MR. NEWMAN: No, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Are you satisfied that his constitutional
10 rights have been observed?

11 MR. NEWMAN: I am, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: Is Mr. Bell pleading guilty because of any 13 illegally obtained evidence in the government's possession that 14 you're aware of?

15 MR. NEWMAN: No, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Based upon your analysis of the law and of 17 the facts, is it your conclusion that it's in Mr. Bell's
18 interest for him to plead guilty today?

19 MR. NEWMAN: It is, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Same questions to Mr. Mayock. I know
21 there's no plea agreement, but throughout your representation of 22 Mr. Day, has he been able to cooperate with you in a competent 23 way?

24 MR. MAYOCK: He has, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Have you discussed the facts of this case

1 in detail with him?

2 MR. MAYOCK: I have.

3 THE COURT: Are you satisfied that he has no
4 meritorious defenses?

5 MR. MAYOCK: I am, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Is he pleading guilty because of any 7 illegally obtained evidence in the possession of the government
8 that you're aware of?

9 MR. MAYOCK: No, Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: Do you think after your analysis of the law
11 and the facts that it's in his best interests to plead guilty?

12 MR. MAYOCK: Yes, I do.

13 THE COURT: Mr. Brown.

14 MR. BROWN: Yes. Your Honor, I would like to state the 15 obvious consequence of pleading guilty in this case as regards
16 supervised release that constitute a violation of their 17 supervised release.

18 THE COURT: That applies only I think to Mr. Day.
19 Parole is the same basic consequence as to Bell.

20 MR. BROWN: Thank you, Your Honor. I'd also like to 21 point out that restitution is mandatory in this case. To my 22 knowledge, currently all the currency from the bank was 23 recovered so I don't believe it will apply. But in case I'm 24 incorrect on that or there was some other loss at the bank, I
25 did want the defendants to know they could be required to pay

1 restitution.

2 THE COURT: You anticipated something I was going to
3 ask you about when I got to you. Your turn will come in just a
4 minute.

5 MR. BROWN: I apologize, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: That's all right. Mr. Mayock, do you know
7 of any reason why I shouldn't accept Mr. Day's guilty plea?

8 MR. MAYOCK: No, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Mr. Brown, as to the plea agreement between 10 the government and Mr. Bell, other than what is expressly set
11 forth in that plea agreement, has the government made any other 12 promises or representations, guarantees to him or his counsel?

13 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Has the government obtained a written 15 statement from either defendant?

16 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Other than what was seized at the time of 18 the arrest, has the government obtained any other evidence
19 directly from the defendants?

20 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: Can you think of any reason why I shouldn't 22 accept the guilty pleas?

23 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor.

24 THE COURT: That's true for both Mr. Bell and Mr. Day?

25 MR. BROWN: Yes.

1 THE COURT: Is there any additional inquiry you want me
2 to touch on, Mr. Brown?

3 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: How about you, Mr. Mayock?

5 MR. MAYOCK: No, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: All right. I'm going to do certain things
7 and here's what they are. As to each of Mr. Bell and Mr. Day, I
8 find that there's a factual basis for the entry of each of the 9 guilty pleas, in the case of Mr. Bell to Counts 2 and 3;
10 Mr. Day, Counts 1, 2 and 3. I find that each of them is alert,
11 seem to be able, intelligent, responsive, good demeanor.

12 I think each of them knows what he's doing and why.
13 Each of them understands the consequences. There seems to be no
14 basis to believe for either of them that there is any extrinsic
15 factor such as threats or physical condition or mental condition
16 or use of prescriptive drugs or other drugs that might interfere
17 with their ability to make a free and voluntary decision.

18 I think they're making a free and voluntary decision.
19 I find there's been no promises made by anyone and no other 20 instances of inducements or coercion that place in question the 21 voluntariness of the decision that each of them is making this 22 afternoon.

23 For all those reasons I order that the guilty plea from 24 Mr. Bell be accepted and the guilty plea from Mr. Day be 25 accepted. We're going to accept the guilty pleas to each of the

1 respective counts. We're going to set a date for sentencing
2 and it won't be until September for a host of reasons.

3 What date do you recommend?

4 THE CLERK: The 13th.

5 THE COURT: September 13th which is a Monday. Is that 6 available?

7 MR. MAYOCK: It is, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Mr. Newman?

11 MR. BROWN: Yes, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: September 13th, 4:00, this court. The 13 presentence report will be compiled by the probation office.
14 Subject to advice that each of you may get from your respective 15 lawyer, I order you to cooperate with the probation office and 16 to return here for sentencing. Whatever the terms were of bail
17 and confinement that were previously imposed, those will remain
18 in effect. I think the marshal representatives are here. I
19 will remand you to the custody of the marshals.

20 Thank you, counsel.

21 MR. MAYOCK: There is one thing Mr. Brown has to bring 22 to your attention at this time regarding the custodial 23 situation.

24 MR. BROWN: Well, Your Honor, it's actually not for 25 Your Honor. It's for the Metropolitan Detention Center. I need

1 to write them a letter, status can be renotified.

2 THE COURT: Mr. Brown --

3 MR. BROWN: There's an order between the two defendants
4 and the Metropolitan Detention Center. It's administrative,
5 Metropolitan Detention Center. But it is true I'm going to 6 rescind that request today.

7 THE COURT: Okay. You may and now you're confirming it
8 on the record.

9 MR. BROWN: I don't think it's actually an agreement,
10 Your Honor. It's a representation that I'm going to do that.

11 THE COURT: All right. Does that take care of that?

12 MR. MAYOCK: Yes, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Anything else, counsel?

14 MR. MAYOCK: No, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Thank you.

3 THE CLERK: CR 99-123-AHM, U.S.A. versus Montez Day and 4 Bruce Bell.

5 Appearances, counsel.

6 MR. BROWN: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Andrew Brown
7 for the government.

8 THE COURT: Good afternoon, Mr. Brown.

9 MR. NEWMAN: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Brian Newman
10 for Mr. Bell who is present in court.

11 MR. MAYOCK: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Michael
12 Mayock on behalf of Montez Day who likewise is present.

13 THE COURT: Good afternoon to all four of you.

14 All right. We're here for the pronouncement of 15 judgment and the sentence on both Mr. Day and Mr. Bell. I would 16 like to do Mr. Bell first.

17 MR. NEWMAN: Your Honor, on behalf of Mr. Bell, HE has 18 asked for a further continuance of today's sentencing. The 19 reason for the continuance -- and we would ask that a short 20 continuance of no more than a week -- is because of a flurry of 21 last-minute responses to my arguments by the probation office
22 which I didn't receive until late I believe Thursday, and also 23 had not gotten the psychiatric report until Tuesday, I think it 24 was Tuesday of last week, none of which Mr. Bell has had an 25 opportunity to even see.

1 So we were talking about he would like the opportunity
2 to see those reports and give me input considering the fact that
3 I think the structural issue that we're going to be addressing,
4 Your Honor, today is the core, whether Mr. Bell is actually a
5 career offender or not. These differences in sentencing between 6 whether he is or he isn't is very significant.

7 THE COURT: What does the psychiatric report then have 8 to do with whether he's a career offender?

9 MR. NEWMAN: Well, that doesn't. He has not seen that 10 report. And that is not the foundation for my request for a 11 week continuance.

12 THE COURT: All right. Well, that's what you said
13 though.

14 MR. NEWMAN: I'm sorry.

15 THE COURT: And I'm really not inclined to drag this 16 out any further.

17 Mr. Brown.

18 MR. BROWN: Your Honor, I just wanted to object to the 19 continuance. We had the change of plea on May 14th. It's been 20 five-and-a-half months. The late filings have been caused by 21 the defendant who filed his papers just days before the hearing
22 putting great strain on the government, the court and the 23 probation office in filing responses within 24 hours so that 24 people would have them.

25 And if he wanted to be sentenced second today to give

1 him a chance to go over the probation officer's responses, the 2 government wouldn't object to that. But the reply from the 3 probation office to his papers, they are minuscule changes.
4 They basically just reiterated their earlier position. So I
5 don't see that there's some big new thing that he needs to read
6 before the sentencing.

7 THE COURT: Okay. Well, I was just going to suggest
8 that you give your -- and I'll go first with Mr. Bell, with Mr.
9 Day. Sit down. You can do it at that table in the back so
10 you're not distracted. You can show him these very skimpy
11 items. They won't take long to review. You can explain them to 12 him. They don't address what you tell me is going to be the 13 principal focus of your argument anyway.

14 I have given both sides so many extensions and so many 15 opportunities to build their case and I have too many other
16 sentences on for next week to continue this again. So I'm going 17 to deny that request.

18 MR. NEWMAN: I understand, Your Honor. But for the 19 record, a lot of the continuance or extensions were because for 20 some reason the Bureau of Prisons moved Mr. Bell to Oklahoma, if 21 the court recalls, and it took a while to find him and to get 22 him back.

23 THE COURT: Let me make it clear to both you and Mr.
24 Bell, I'm not holding that against him in terms of your request
25 now. I'm simply reflecting that this has gone on for a long

1 time. You've both had an opportunity to meet with other each
2 and coordinate with each other. And I think you'll both have 3 the full opportunity to be heard. So I'll take Mr. Day first,
4 but that won't take all that long. So be efficient in showing
5 this material to your client.

6 MR. NEWMAN: I will, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Don't tell me you're going to seek a
8 continuance, Mr. Mayock.

9 MR. MAYOCK: Well, perhaps, Your Honor. There was a
10 little bit of a miss in the communications. Apparently 11 Mr. Brown had filed and FAXed a response to my position paper, 12 which admittedly I didn't file until Wednesday of last week as 13 your court stamp will indicate.

14 However, it will also indicate inside the attachment
15 that it was at that time that I was getting a copy from the 16 psychologist, a report, and I waited for that report. That was 17 the basis for the delay waiting for that.

18 But in any event, going back to the issue, I did not
19 receive a copy of the government's opposition. There was a FAX
20 number that I had about four or five years ago. And apparently 21 there was a FAX that was transmitted, that's happened in the 22 past.

23 Unless Mr. Brown has that document showing the FAX
24 number, it's a FAX of a firm that used to be on the same floor
25 where I was and I didn't get it in any event.

1 THE COURT: When did you get it?

2 MR. MAYOCK: I just was able to read his in court
3 today. And the problem that I have is this. Essentially my 4 client has advised me and I saw nothing to contradict this that 5 the early conviction, the first conviction was for powder
6 cocaine, not crack cocaine.

7 And secondly, there was an objection to unsworn
8 statements of the defendant. Now if there's going to be some 9 allegation that his father was not arrested and actually 10 convicted for murdering his mother, we can get court records if 11 that's what the prosecution seems to want. But I don't think 12 that that is essential. If that's the kind of record that 13 they're looking for, we can definitely obtain that if we had a 14 very brief continuance.

15 MR. BROWN: Two points, Your Honor. As far as the 16 crack cocaine versus powder cocaine, that was an inference that 17 I made from the quantity of the cocaine. I remembered reading
18 it, but I went over the presentence report just before sitting 19 down and I don't see it. So for all I know, it may well be 20 powder cocaine and I'm willing to so stipulate for purposes of 21 the sentencing.

22 And as to the second point, Your Honor, the government
23 isn't contending that it didn't happen. The government is 24 merely saying that they haven't carried their burden.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Well, there's no need for a

1 continuance in terms of what your concerns are, Mr. Mayock. I
2 have not assumed that it was crack cocaine and the difference
3 between whether it was crack or other cocaine is not going to be 4 at all a factor in my, and hasn't been as I prepared for this 5 sentencing.

6 In terms of the government's position relating to your
7 client's childhood history, I have construed it the way
8 Mr. Brown just described. I have assumed for purposes of my 9 analysis that what apparently happened did happen, what you say
10 happened happened. And that is to say that as horrific as it
11 is, your client as a very young boy may have actually seen, but 12 in any event, directly experienced the slaying of his mother by 13 his father.

14 I think that there are other reasons why it's highly 15 unlikely I would consider that as a basis for departure. It may 16 be a basis and I think there may well be other bases to not 17 impose the sentence at the high end of the guidelines as the 18 probation recommended, at least as to your client. But what you
19 think I might be inclined to misunderstand or not apply won't be 20 a factor at all. So I want to go ahead with today's proceeding.

21 MR. MAYOCK: Fine, Your Honor. If that's the case,
22 we're ready to proceed.

23 THE COURT: Okay. Then let's do so.

24 Now did you show to Mr. Day the government's very brief
25 response?

1 MR. MAYOCK: No, I didn't. I just read it in court.

2 THE COURT: Well, I want you --

3 MR. MAYOCK: I have discussed some of the factors with 4 him.

5 THE COURT: Mr. Day, do you feel that based upon what 6 Mr. Mayock summarized to you after he this afternoon for the 7 first time read the government's opposition to your position
8 about sentencing, do you feel that you understand what the 9 government's position is?

10 DEFENDANT DAY: Yes. Yes, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Then I don't think it's necessary
12 even to take a short break for Mr. Day to read that. And it's 13 pretty straightforward anyway. So we're going to proceed now
14 and let me start by saying this. Obviously both sides have read
15 the presentence report. So have I.

16 On Mr. Day's behalf, Mr. Mayock has made a number of 17 points and I'm going to recite those and then give you an 18 opportunity, Mr. Mayock, to supplement those by giving you a
19 focus and that focus will be my response to it. The way to do
20 this most efficiently and Mr. Newman, I want you to listen to 21 what I'm saying because this is going to be applicable to your 22 client as well.

23 After careful review of the way that the presentence
24 report and the recommendation characterize the guideline range,
25 I believe that there is a more precise way of stating it. And

1 this is the way it should be stated and this is the way I
2 believe the range is as presented by the probation office.

3 Your client, Mr. Mayock, has pled guilty to all three 4 counts. Mr. Bell pleaded only to Counts 2 and 3. As to 5 Mr. Day, the guideline sentencing range really is between 188
6 and 235 months. Well, at least as to Mr. Bell it is. Let's
7 take his to begin with. That's on Count 2. Plus an additional 8 84 months consecutive for Count 3. That means that the 9 guideline range is 272 months at the downward end, at the low
10 end, and 319 months at the high end.

11 For your client, Mr. Mayock, who is dealing with a 12 guilty plea to all three counts, it comes out much the same, but 13 the calculation is a little bit different. There is 60 months
14 on Count 1 -- excuse me. There is a range on Count 2 of just 15 what it is for Mr. Bell, between 188 months and 235 months.
16 There is a range, not a range, but a consecutive sentence
17 mandated on Count 3 of 84 months. Those two counts wind up 18 being at the range of 272 months to 319 months and that's the 19 range that I have calculated for purposes of figuring out what 20 is the fair sentence for your client as well.

21 As to the first count, for Mr. Day I would like to ask
22 our representative from the probation office whether that 23 changes the range given that there's a third count.

24 THE PROBATION OFFICER: It does not change the 25 guideline range; however, the sentencing mandatory maximum is 60

1 months. And then on that particular count your cap is 60
2 months.

3 THE COURT: Okay. So the range will be the same,
4 Mr. Mayock.

5 MR. MAYOCK: Yes.

6 THE COURT: Now getting back then to the positions that
7 you have asserted, Mr. Mayock, you believe that the criminal 8 history is overstated. And essentially as I construe and 9 understand your argument, it's because your client after appeal
10 was sentenced to a 16-month sentence, had already served 27
11 months before the weapon component of the conviction was 12 reversed and really was being sentenced for mere possession, not 13 mere possession for sale. But the offense occurred when he was 14 young and that to consider it to be a basis for career offender
15 status is unfair and distorts what is in fact the true situation
16 in terms of the prior criminal history.

17 Secondly, you have made an eloquent argument for a
18 departure based on what you classify as post-traumatic stress
19 syndrome and that gets us to the unique situation of the 20 father's apparent slaying of the mother. And coupled with that,
21 you point to a different classification arising out of the I 22 think the same concept and the same facts and that's that he 23 suffered extraordinary abuse as a child.

24 As to the criminal history factor, I think that I'm 25 inclined to accept Mr. Brown's response to that. I think that

1 the circumstances of the offense and the nature of the drug that
2 was being possessed unquestionably make it appropriate to serve
3 as the basis for career offender status. I do want you to 4 address that in light of what the government has said.

5 As to the request for departure, what most, what I find
6 to be most noteworthy is that Dr. Maloney's report itself and he 7 had two reports and I read them both, every word of both of 8 them. He said that it couldn't be argued that these awful
9 events caused Mr. Day to engage in, quote, "the illegal and 10 problematical behavior." He said -- and this is also a quote -- 11 "He certainly does not present with any significant symptoms of 12 a major mental disturbance."

13 I went and looked at not only the provisions you've 14 cited, but 5(k) (2.13) which is the guideline provision relating 15 to diminished capacity. And then that speaks in terms of a 16 significant impairment, significantly impaired ability to 17 understand the wrongfulness of the behavior or to control the 18 behavior that the defendant knows is wrongful. And neither 19 component of what would be significantly reduced capacity has 20 been established by Dr. Maloney's report.

21 So although I think there are considerations that 22 militate in favor of not sentencing Mr. Day to the 319 months
23 that the probation office recommended -- and I'll give you a
24 chance to be heard about that too, Mr. Brown -- and although I
25 acknowledge that under the Brown decision where the Ninth

1 Circuit clarified a misunderstanding that Judge Tevrizian had, I
2 would have the discretion, if I thought it was warranted, to 3 make a departure, I decline to do so tentatively.

4 I'll listen to both of you, you and your client. For 5 the reasons that I have indicated, I don't think a departure is 6 warranted under the evidence before me. It is presumptively
7 discouraged. Disadvantaged upbringing and psychological trauma
8 such as this are not presumptively the basis. I think that the 9 guideline range as I have defined it and refined it is the range
10 within which the sentence should be imposed.

11 So that's my attempt, Mr. Mayock, to give you guidance.
12 You need to know, Mr. Day, that you have a right to speak to me.
13 I have been addressing your lawyer in kind of technical terms and 14 that's inevitable because that's what the guidelines require a
15 judge to do. It's just the way they're structured. But I do
16 want to hear from you. And with that I'll give the lawyers a 17 chance to be heard now.

18 Go ahead, Mr. Mayock.
19

MR. MAYOCK: "Thank you, Your Honor.

20 The first point that I would want to make, and I will 21 focus these points on the departure, there are admittedly
22 categories that have been set forth in the sentencing
23 guidelines, particularly the 5(h)(1) sequence. The prosecution
24 has said that family ties is not ordinarily a basis for 25 departure and that under 5(h)(1.2) lack of guidance and a

1 disadvantaged upbringing is not relevant. They cite those and 2 they also cite a lack of guidance case coming from another
3 circuit involving a decision from the Second Circuit about --

4 THE COURT: A very recent decision.

5 MR. MAYOCK: Yes, but it's not from this circuit
6 either. But it's a stepfather killing, being killed. It
7 doesn't say anything about whether it was in the presence of 8 the defendant in that case who was apparently eight at the time.
9 Also it was not a mother. Particularly important and 10 instructive would be the fact that you have a mother who is 11 murdered by her husband.

12 These are the parents of Mr. Day when he's 13 approximately six years old. And as Dr. Maloney reports, that 14 is a very crucial and important time in any child's life as far
15 as what impact that is going to have on them. So I would say
16 that even though Revere seems to talk about something that might 17 be significant, it's not relevant.

18 We pointed out in our position paper Section 5(h)(1.3)
19 as mental and emotional condition. And I analogize that to 20 departures that had been made under the post-traumatic stress
21 syndrome ground. And essentially as the court has recognized,
22 that is under diminished capacity. Diminished capacity, as the 23 court I'm sure is recognizing in looking at it, does not deal
24 specifically or allow departures where you have a violent act
25 taking place. But we're not asking in this case for any

1 departure based on that basis.

2 Rather, what we're asking for and it's specifically
3 mentioned is a downward departure because of extraordinary abuse
4 suffered by the defendant as a child. I would suggest that does
5 not come within the compass of family ties. It does not come
6 within the compass of lack of guidance either which the 7 prosecutor cites. Instead we're talking about unchartered
8 waters. I would talk about this in this way.

9 The Kuhn decision was decided in 1998 as this court is 10 well aware. In Kuhn they said virtually any appropriate 11 information relevant to a defendant's background, character or 12 conduct could be presented to the court as a basis for a 13 downward departure and the court's discretion was virtually 14 unlimited. If those bases were presented in an unusual way, the 15 court can depart downward.

16 My suggestion is that extraordinary abuse suffered as a
17 child doesn't directly fall under mental or emotional condition, 18 although that may be the closest. It doesn't fall under lack of 19 guidance and it doesn't fall under family ties.

20 Instead I think we have to take a look at those 21 sections, these 5(h) sections, and see when they were enacted.
22 Those were enacted in 1991. If you look at Kuhn, that's a 1998
23 U.S. Supreme Court decision. Clearly the U.S. Supreme Court
24 could recognize those and in essence gave authorization for a
25 court to create and have a departure where something doesn't fit

1 neatly within the box. And clearly in this case we don't 2 believe the box includes Mr. Day within the family ties or lack 3 of guidance 5(h)(1) groupings.

4 Again I would point out, as the court is well aware,
5 that the Ninth Circuit in the Brown case did consider severe
6 childhood abuse and neglect and a psychologist's report about 7 that childhood trauma as a basis for a downward departure. And 8 again, forgetting about Brown for a moment but a more recent 9 case, in United States versus Sanchez Rodriguez, the court
10 authorized, an en banc decision, authorized a departure for a
11 career offender along the base offense level where the predicate
12 offense was a very small amount of drugs. So I'm trying to come
13 around back to this point.

14 I think if we look at this entire situation based on 15 what has happened to my client in his life, you see here's a
16 person who, and I won't reiterate all the points that were made
17 in the paper, who has had a very traumatic, a very difficult
18 life, a life that no one would ever wish upon anyone else, any 19 other human being. ----

20 And he falls within a scope that is not clearly covered 21 by any of the guidelines and that's why Kuhn would apply. And 22 that's why under these circumstances too the court could look
23 under the authority of Sanchez Rodriguez for a downward
24 departure.

25 Specifically we've pointed out in looking at this kind

1 of case the four building blocks of mental health, the first one
2 being heredity. And here we've got an individual whose father
3 was diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic. And I've been 4 advised by his uncle, Arthur Day, that in the last couple of 5 months he's attempted to commit suicide. This is the heredity
6 that Mr. Day has.

7 The second building block is early nurturance. He 8 didn't get that. His mother was murdered. He was shifted from 9 place to place. And then his father came back when he was 10 probably about nine or ten years old and then raised him based 11 on voices that he heard directing him where to go and put him in 12 incredibly difficult situations in gang infested areas, poor 13 schools.

14 He's had numerous problems with early nurturance which 15 he did not receive. His traumatic experiences are just 16 overwhelming, start again with the murder and being reared by a
17 paranoid schizophrenic father, clearly that's a traumatic life
18 experience. And last, the quality of support system. He 19 doesn't have that. "It's clear he has nothing. He has on all 20 four building blocks of mental health, he has fallen far, far 21 short.

22 On TV the other night there was a program involving 23 Mike Wallace. Mike Wallace talked about having depression and 24 what effect it had on him. But you look at him and you look at 25 other people like Tipper Gore who have had admitted problems

1 with chronic depression and you look at what they have as far as 2 the quality of their support systems. And early nurturance and 3 a lack of traumatic experiences -- I can't say anything about
4 heredity -- but on those bases they're very different.

5 Even though they have mental problems, they don't have 6 the problems with the whole, all four building blocks basically
7 being shattered and falling down. That's why Mr. Day is very 8 much different than other people who might come in and might 9 make this sort of claim. On that basis I would respectfully
10 submit to the court that there is a basis for a downward
11 departure because of that and because of these circumstances
12 which are particularly unusual.

13 Turning to the overstated criminal history. I think
14 Your Honor hit the nail on the head. You said there were 15 problems that he had in getting an extra 11 months after the 16 case came back. He entered a guilty plea. Rather than remain
17 in custody and go through another trial after serving 27 months,
18 he did enter a plea.

19 Clearly the circumstances of that for an immediate 20 release would be a justification for someone to think that the 21 criminal history was over represented, particularly because he 22 had those extra 11 months. He'd already served above and beyond
23 the maximum that he could possibly get if he were convicted of a 24 charge.

25 At the time he was an 18-year-old youth. It was a

1 possession only case of powder cocaine which was for personal
2 use. On that basis I suggest respectfully that the court
3 reconsider the criminal history as being over represented,
4 particularly when you think of the circumstances under which
5 someone at 18 would have the opportunity to go on with his life
6 and the easiest thing to do would be to enter that plea and get
7 released from jail instead of continuing on on the presumptive
8 detention that, as the court is well aware, occurs in drug
9 cases.

10 THE COURT: Are you basically saying that I should 11 consider your client not have to been factually guilty, that he 12 didn't commit the crime that he wound up pleading to because he 13 pled given the circumstances you've now described?

14 MR. MAYOCK: Well, I'm saying that under the 15 circumstances rather than go forward with the trial, the case
16 was reversed and tainted parts were thrown out.

17 THE COURT: Right.

18 MR. MAYOCK: That was a clear motivating factor as 19 to -- and I'm not saying he didn't enter a plea. He's never 20 denied that he entered a plea. But when you look behind the 21 motive for entering that plea, to be released, particularly when 22 you've got a young man who committed this offense at age 18.
23 He's definitely not going to be as thoughtful as someone with 24 more life experiences, particularly more beneficial life
25 experiences than Mr. Day has had in his life, that that's a

1 basis for saying over representation or overstating the criminal
2 history occurred. And if that's the case, I have suggested in 3 our papers that the court consider looking at this as a 4 non-criminal history, a non- --

5 THE COURT: Non-career offender.

6 MR. MAYOCK: -- non-career offender case and look at 7 the offense level and consider what the offense level would have 8 been just considering all these factors, and we came up with a
9 calculation if the court did that it would be a guideline
10 range -- and this is a criminal history offense level of 27 that 11 was calculated by the probation officer -- would come out to be,
12 if the court made his criminal history category 4 instead of 5,
13 because it was just on the border of 5, 100 to 125 months plus
14 84 months which would give a sentencing range of 184 to 209
15 months.

16 Clearly that's a very, very substantial sentence.
17 We're not talking about anything that's inconsequential in any 18 way. That's an awful lot of time and it's a time that would 19 give my client the opportunity, we hope as Dr. Maloney hopes, to 20 receive the kind of counseling that he didn't receive early in 21 life and which he clearly needs and which Dr. Maloney who is a
22 clinical psychologist at the USC Medical School recognizes and I
23 would ask that the court impose that sort of a sentence.

24 THE COURT: Okay. Now a couple of questions. In terms
25 of counseling, I can make a recommendation and it will either

1 become available or not regardless of which alternative proposal
2 I adopt, right?

3 MR. MAYOCK: That's true, Your Honor. The Bureau of 4 Prisons has its own authority to do what it wants often.

5 THE COURT: And I hope he does get the benefit of 6 counseling if he needs it and I'll say so when I pronounce the 7 judgment.

8 Secondly, why don't you address what has been very 9 troubling to me which is the circumstances of the flight. Your 10 client was the driver. We could be sitting here, but for the 11 grace of God, with dead victims out there given that incredibly 12 reckless conduct that he displayed in trying to get away from 13 arrest.

14 I know what your arguments are and you've made them
15 very, very eloquently and that's not just trying to pat you on 16 the back. You've really done a good job. But you haven't said
17 anything about that and any judge sitting up here is going to be 18 greatly troubled, at least I'm greatly troubled by that.

19 MR. MAYOCK: I thought that the court might be asking a 20 question like that. I directed that specific question to my 21 client earlier to ask him what happened. And that's one of the 22 reasons why the post-traumatic stress analogy and argument was 23 made. What happens to somebody who has mental problems of this 24 kind and has experienced this kind of life is they just react.
25 They don't sit and contemplate. They in a stressful situation

1 find that they are acting in ways that a normal person wouldn't 2 act. That's what that entire stress syndrome is all about is 3 that kind of behavior.

4 What he did was he did drive, although there were a
5 couple of parts of the report that are inaccurate. Initially he 6 did not drive the van away, the vehicle away from the bank.
7 They got in a second vehicle and he was driving that vehicle.
8 That vehicle ended up being chased. There were --

9 THE COURT: Don't go into what happened during the 10 chase because it's just going to upset me all over again. I
11 know how dangerous it was.

12 MR. MAYOCK: The police were following. I think there 13 was a helicopter or two as well. He pulled into a mall and just 14 stopped where the police came up. He was the only one who 15 remained in the car. He didn't try to run at that point.

16 He has expressed to me that the concern he had was that 17 he was going to be shot and he felt that if he went to a mall,
18 that by being there where there were a lot of people, he 19 wouldn't get shot by the police.

20 I'm not saying this is clear thinking because clearly 21 it's not. But it is stressful thinking and it's the kind of 22 thinking that a person who has had the kind of upbringing that 23 my client has maybe engages in. That's the explanation he's 24 given me about why he stopped there and why he just sat in the 25 car and didn't make any effort to take his hands off the

1 steering wheel. He just brought the car to a stop and made no
2 further effort to run away.

3 THE COURT: I would like to hear from Mr. Brown before
4 I give Mr. Day a chance to speak with me. That way you can at 5 least have in mind whatever it is the prosecution is going to 6 say, Mr. Day.

7 MR. Brown.

8 MR. BROWN: Thank you, Your Honor.

9 First, I have a different explanation for arriving at 10 the mall and that's when you're being chased by a helicopter, 11 you don't really have a lot of options to evade the police on 12 the ground. Really the only way you're going to be able to get 13 away from them is if you can be someplace where a helicopter
14 can't see you such as inside an enclosed building.

15 There really isn't a better way to flee in hot pursuit
16 than if you can blend in with the crowd. And the fact that he 17 did not continue to flee after he stopped the car, I attribute 18 to the fact that the police were right on him and he didn't have 19 an opportunity and that his co-conspirator who was not driving
20 and was therefore able to leave the car more quickly only got a
21 few feet before being captured by the police.

22 THE COURT: Mr. Brown, what I would find most 23 productive in terms of your response is the issue of whether he 24 he's a career offender and how to deal with that first 25 conviction for the cocaine.

1 MR. BROWN: Okay. Well, Your Honor, he pled guilty to 2 possession of cocaine with the intent to distribute which is 3 clearly a predicate felony under the guidelines. And the 4 offense was actually a very serious one. There were three 5 separate firearms found in the house in which he was hiding.

6 THE COURT: But in the end, he wasn't convicted of 7 anything related to those firearms; is that correct?

8 MR. BROWN: No. His conviction for possession of a 9 firearm during the drug trafficking crime was reversed on 10 appeal. But it's not necessary that he be convicted of a 11 firearms offense in order for the conviction to count as a 12 predicate felony.

13 And here it's the defendant's burden to prove that his 14 criminal history is overstated. And all the defendant has said
15 is well, he may have had a reason to plead to an offense that he 16 didn't in fact commit. The defendant certainly hasn't said
17 that. There's certainly no evidence. This is merely a lawyer's
18 speculation as to what happened.

19 All we know for a fact is that he pled guilty to a drug
20 trafficking offense. Not only that, but there were very serious
21 circumstances surrounding it, including the shooting of a police
22 officer. So I don't think that there's any way to get around,
23 even if Your Honor was inclined to go there, the defendant
24 certainly has not carried his burden. There's nothing that 25 indicates that the count of conviction is an accurate one.

1 Moreover, I think that the history of the defendant
2 shows that a departure on criminal history access would be
3 inappropriate because of the danger he poses to the community,
4 which I think is the most serious factor warranting a sentence
5 at the high end. The defendant has numerous involvements with 6 firearms. In Paragraphs 59, 66, 73 and 84 there's all the 7 defendant involved with firearms.

8 Let's just take one of those, for instance Paragraph 9 84, where he was not actually charged with this. He was 10 arrested for being a felon in possession of a firearm in January
11 of 1994. Your Honor, that was just months before he then got 12 convicted of armed bank robbery where he had a pistol that the 13 teller saw tucked into his belt. And now, Your Honor, he gets 14 out of prison in mid-1998 and then in the beginning of 1999 he's 15 again arrested for armed bank robbery. This time two 16 defendants, two firearms. I think with his history of 17 involvement in firearms, the court should decline any departure 18 in the court's discretion because he's simply a danger to the 19 community.

20 Whether he's going to kill somebody for recklessly
21 fleeing from a crime or whether he's going to kill somebody with 22 the firearms that he uses time and again is immaterial. The 23 fact of the matter is, he's an extremely dangerous man. He's 24 had two opportunities to turn his life around in prison and each 25 time all he's done is get involved in ever-escalating crimes in

1 terms of their seriousness.

2 THE COURT: Just for the sake of analytical precision,
3 do you construe Mr. Mayock's arguments relating to the career
4 offender status as a request for a departure?

5 MR. BROWN: That is how I understood it, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Okay. I understood it slightly differently
7 as a request for a correction in terms of the calculation.

8 Which did you intend it to be, Mr. Mayock?

9 MR. MAYOCK: As a departure. That's why I was citing
10 the Sanchez Rodriguez case.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Anything further, Mr. Brown?

12 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

14 Mr. Day, would you like to say anything to me? You
15 have a right to do it and sometimes it's very helpful to a
16 judge. So feel free to do it if you choose.

17 THE DEFENDANT: Your Honor, I'm not going to try to 18 make excuses for what I've done wrong. I admit to what I did
19 wrong in this case and in the last bank robbery.

20 I pled guilty to unarmed bank robbery which I did
21 commit. And I went to trial and the jury found me guilty of not 22 having a gun because -- not because they just didn't believe,
23 because they believed me, but they found me not guilty of not 24 having a gun because I didn't have one and because the people
25 had doubt.

1 They wasn't sure where I brought my bag from. They
2 couldn't say. They said I had a bag with blue and brown writing
3 on the bag and they said the gun was blue and brown. When they
4 asked where was that, where did I get it, they didn't even know.
5 Well, we don't know, he just had it in his hand; one minute he 6 did, one minute he didn't.

7 But I didn't have a gun. That's what I pled guilty
8 immediately. When my lawyer told me, I said I'll plead guilty
9 to the robbery. I did it. I was desperate and in the act of 10 impulse I went into Wells Fargo. I banked at Wells Fargo. I
11 had about $12 in my account. My wife was -- my fiancee was 12 pregnant. The rent was due. I walked into there and I said
13 give me the money. I did that. That was just stupidity and it
14 was done -- it was just stupidity.

15 The first criminal case that I have, the possession
16 with intent to distribute powder cocaine, I was visiting a
17 friend's house. I was in the back room where there was no guns
18 with a lady. There was no drugs found in that room. The guy
19 who shot the police was in a totally different room with the gun
20 that belonged to his girlfriend. Okay?

21 The cocaine that they found was found in a can inside
22 of a bathroom. There was no evidence in the whole trial against 23 me being a drug dealer of any sort in there. There was nobody
24 said that I sold drugs. It was they were saying that the guy
25 that lived there sold the drugs.

1 I was visiting, the girl that was with me was visiting 2 that house. And the Appeals Court overturned the case because 3 of the lack of evidence in the trial, not just because of the 4 judge's ruling in the argument, but because of a lack of 5 evidence also. And I pled guilty because they told me I was 6 going to go home. When they said you plead guilty you go home
7 tomorrow. I mean, I've already been in prison two years, over
8 two years. I pled guilty. I didn't know that this would do
9 this to me later.

10 This case right here, this was stupidity. I mean, this 11 was just -- I don't know why. I don't know where the impulse,
12 why I just allowed myself to do something this stupid. Running
13 from the police, I was scared. The police was pulling guns out
14 on us. Every time we turned a corner they were coming out their 15 cars pointing guns. We were ducking. I didn't want to get 16 shot.

17 There was no guns in the car when the police finally 18 caught up to us. And I ran because I did not want to get shot.
19 I did not want them to shoot us because I know they're coming
20 because of the armed bank robbery. I don't want them to shoot
21 me. I'm trying to get away. I don't want no guns in the car.

22 I don't want to get killed. I don't want to get
23 killed. I pulled into the parking lot because I know there's a 24 lot of cars there, there's a lot of people there. I'm hoping
25 they're not going to open fire. I didn't jump out of the car

2 THE COURT: A couple of people got hit by the car,
3 didn't they?

4 THE DEFENDANT: I had an accident in the intersection.
5 A light turned red on me and I was going so fast I slid on the 6 brakes. I couldn't stop and I wish I could apologize to the 7 person.

8 THE COURT: You hit one car and that car hit a second 9 car, right?

10 THE DEFENDANT: Yes. I hit the back of a burgundy,
11 dark burgundy mini van. I remember it clear as day. And that 12 car slid and hit the front of another car that was turning
13 right, making a right-hand corner. I mean I stopped for a 14 second and all I could think about was the police was going to 15 shoot me. So I proceeded on.

16 I didn't get out -- I wasn't trying to run from them as 17 far as -- I knew I couldn't get away from no helicopter. I know
18 once the helicopter's on you, you're going to jail. But I
19 didn't want them to shoot me and I kept driving around looking 20 for somewhere where it was populated that I could go to to keep 21 them from killing me. That's all I could think of. I didn't 22 want them to shoot me and kill me.

23 I mean, I can't ask -- I'm not asking, Your Honor, I'm 24 not asking you give me leniency because I didn't do anything
25 wrong or because I don't deserve to be punished. I agree. I

1 accept the fact that I deserve to be punished. I pled guilty
2 with no plea agreement, not because I was going to get a
3 benefit. I didn't get a benefit from the plea. I pled guilty
4 because I know I was guilty. There was no benefit offered to 5 me. No deal. There was no deal. I pled guilty because I know
6 I was guilty. I know I was caught dead bang doing what I was 7 doing.

8 As far as my childhood, Your Honor, that's something
9 that I don't normally discuss. I don't normally even tell
10 people. I have friends that's known me for years that don't 11 know my father killed my mother. And they don't know because 12 that's something that I don't talk about and I don't think is 13 any of their business.

14 I didn't tell none -- I never told anybody about it
15 until -- I didn't tell -- my fiancee told my lawyer the last 16 time I had a case when my lawyer talked about the issue. I just 17 didn't want to push the issue because it's something that I have 18 been dealing with all my life. And I have never known how to 19 deal with it. It's not something that -- I mean, it's just 20 something I've never known how to deal with it.

21 I'm asking for leniency not because I want to go home.
22 Because I don't feel that I deserve that much time. Because I
23 didn't make -- the mistakes that I made, a lot of it was made
24 out of impulses. The robbery of the bank was pure impulse. I
25 was visiting a friend which bad company brings about problems, I

1 agree. And this robbery right here was a stupid mistake. But I
2 know maybe one day I'll have the opportunity, I don't know.

3 Maybe I could write a letter and apologize to the 4 people in the car. I would like to apologize to the people in 5 the bank because I know they were scared. Even the teller in 6 the bank, I told -- not the teller, but the security guard, he 7 had his hands up. I said put your hands down, man, I'm not
8 going to do anything to you, man. Because I had no intentions
9 of physically hurting anybody. I needed some money.

10 My father after the FBI went and talked to my father,
11 they got my father attempting suicide. My family had to move
12 him back out of town. And now I'm going through more. I've got 13 more pain from my personal life than I do about being in jail.

14 THE COURT: Well, I understand the impact of that and I
15 also understand as best as somebody who is a total stranger to 16 you can from a very different perspective why the trauma of your 17 childhood or at least the experience of your childhood is not 18 something you quickly or routinely talk about. I really hear 19 you on that. ----

20 Is there anything further that you think I need to 21 know?

22 THE DEFENDANT: I mean, I think you have more than 23 enough in front of you to take your judgment, Your Honor. I
24 would just like to apologize to those that I've hurt. I mean,
25 the people inside the bank and the people that I ran into their

1 cars and the person that was involved in it and the trauma that
2 I brought upon them.

3 As I started to say about post-traumatic stress
4 disorder, I realize the trauma that I put people in by the 5 things that I've done. And I just hope that it doesn't affect 6 them like it's affected me. And there's nothing else I have to 7 say, Your Honor. Thank you for your time.

8 THE COURT: All right. I find that the guideline range
9 is what I stated. The low end would be 272 and the high end
10 would be 319, taking into account the mandatory consecutive 84
11 months on Count 3. I am not going to depart of either of the 12 bases that Mr. Day or his lawyer ask for and here's why.

13 As to whether or not the prior criminal record
14 overstates the seriousness of Mr. Day's offenses or distorts his 15 criminal profile, I think that the real question at its core is 16 what kind of risk to society does the prior history suggest 17 should be a factor for classification and for purposes of 18 sentencing. And I don't think that Mr. Day's history can be 19 looked at only in terms of the possession with intent to 20 distribute offense and the current charge before me and the 21 prior bank robbery before that.

22 There is a pattern of criminal behavior. It's 23 reflected in the probation report only in part in the sections
24 that Mr. Brown pointed to. I think that the fact that he was 18
25 when the cocaine offense occurred is a factor that affects where

1 I come out on the guidelines. I find that the particular
2 details of this offense and the explanation that Mr. Day just
3 gave me for what happened during the attempted flight reflect a
4 couple of factors that actually incline me not to depart.

5 Mr. Day's own statements are understandable. Not 6 wanting to be shot is a basic and very survival instinct that we 7 all, almost all of us have. But the choice that he made to 8 attempt to protect himself was made at the expense of society
9 and I'm afraid that that would be the choice he would make in 10 comparable circumstances in the future until and unless he can 11 get either the counseling or the treatment or the self insight
12 that would enable him to balance his interests as he perceives
13 them, his fears as he feels them with the interest and the fears
14 and the needs and the rights of other people, particularly other 15 innocent people.

16 So while I would have the discretion to accept 17 Mr. Mayock's requested departure on the seriousness of the 18 offense and whether or not Mr. Day should be classified as a
19 career offender, I decline to do so.

20 With respect to the impact of what happened when 21 Mr. Day was five or six, it's astonishing that someone could be 22 as strong as you appear to be, Mr. Day. I don't want you to 23 think I'm holding that against you. But in fact, I admire that 24 you can stand before me and speak to me in a really unusually 25 articulate way. You can deal with something in public that

1 slices anybody to the bone and that you can be capable of 2 alternative behavior in light of that.

3 The information that Mr. Mayock attempted to get and 4 that in fact was provided by the doctor doesn't support the 5 factors that Mr. Mayock pointed to. He has done what a good
6 lawyer should try to do and that is develop a basis for a
7 departure that isn't focused on any particular ground but 8 combines all of them and would make the whole greater than the 9 sum of its parts.

10 I don't say that to demean your argument, Mr. Mayock.
11 But that's the way I think it comes over. And I'm trying to 12 look at the whole here. And the whole that I see is somebody
13 who had other alternatives, even -- what I understand from the 14 probation reports -- in terms of the Seventh Day Adventist 15 suffering that you were exposed to, the several years of 16 non-criminal, non-violent, non-suicidal behavior on the part of 17 your father, you had opportunities, that you didn't have the 18 opportunities that many other people in society have, that I may 19 have had is unfortunate, but it doesn't require or authorize a
20 judge to say I'm going to depart downward from these factors.

21 And for those reasons and even given the recognition
22 that I'm now reflecting that I could do it, I decline to do it.
23 But I'm not going to sentence you to the 319 months. I don't 24 think that that would be appropriate for a number of reasons.
25 And those reasons need to be expressed because the range of the 1 guidelines here is in excess of 24 months.

2 Unlike Mr. Bell, Mr. Day is a younger man. There's an
3 opportunity that if the message is correct and if it's 4 calibrated, if I came out with something that is appropriate and 5 you may not be ever in agreement with that either today,
6 tomorrow or ten years from now. But what I'm trying to do is 7 reflect the seriousness of your conduct to the potential for you
8 to do better.

9 To simply and routinely give you what I'm authorized to 10 because of what you did, which is incredibly serious and not 11 just an isolated event, I think would be a mistake. I think 12 that you need to be given a hope and I'm trying to give you the 13 basis to hope that there is some opportunity, particularly at 14 your relatively young age. You'll be in jail no matter whether 15 I bought and accepted every argument that Mr. Mayock made. The 16 term would be lengthy even at that classification.

17 I haven't accepted his argument. But I don't want you
18 to think that I'm putting you in the same boat as Mr. Bell or 19 that I would just take all of the significant and very 20 compelling circumstances and say this is a bad guy, I'll give 21 him the highest end of the range I'm authorized to consider.
22 That is what I'm not going to do. So that's the reason for the 23 sentence that I'm now about to impose and here is the sentence.

24 Pursuant to Section 5E1.2, Subsection A of the 25 guidelines -- Mr. Brown?

1 MR. BROWN: Yes, Your Honor. I apologize if I missed
2 this, but I don't believe Your Honor has inquired whether the 3 defendant and defense counsel reviewed and discussed the 4 presentence report as is required under Rule 32(c)(3)(A). I
5 also don't whether -- I don't believe Your Honor has adopted the 6 findings of the presentence report.

7 THE COURT: Well, I will get to the findings in a
8 minute. I have not adopted the findings in terms of the way the 9 range has been reflected. I don't understand exactly what the 10 basis is for a potential life sentence. Neither lawyer has 11 addressed that. I've looked into that and I'm aware of at least 12 one decision, a Ninth Circuit decision, that says in essence if 13 there is a mandatory minimum and no max, a life sentence can be 14 implied as the max.

15 But that's under 924 Subsection E, not under 924(c).
16 So I don't know what the basis is for considering that there was 17 a potential upward range of a life sentence here. For that 18 reason I'm not accepting their findings. But as reflected and 19 corrected, and I thought I did this adequately at the beginning,
20 I accept their findings and their calculations.

21 In terms of the review of the report, I thought we had 22 gone over that. Mr. Mayock and Mr. Day, you have had a chance
23 to review the presentence report: is that correct?

24 MR. MAYOCK: It is, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: And you and at least the government's

1 response to your opposition, correct?

2 MR. MAYOCK: Yes, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Is there any basis that you can think of 4 procedurally why it is not timely for me to impose sentence?

5 MR. MAYOCK: No, Your Honor, no legal cause.

6 THE COURT: Okay. Pursuant to Section 5E1.2 of the 7 guidelines, all fines are waived because I find that Mr. Day
8 does not have the ability to pay a fine. It is ordered that the 9 defendant shall pay to the United States a special assessment of 10 $300 which is due immediately to the clerk of the court.

11 Pursuant to the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984 it is the 12 judgment of the court that the defendant Mr. Montez Day is 13 hereby committed on Counts 1, 2 and 3 of the indictment to the 14 custody of the Bureau of Prisons to be imprisoned for a term of 15 288 months. That is 24 years. This term consists of -- I have 16 to break this down. A combined -- Mr. Brown?

17 MR. BROWN: No, Your Honor. I was just going to break
18 it down.

19 THE COURT: How were you going to break it down?

20 MR. BROWN: 60 months on Count 1 to be run concurrently
21 with 204 months on Count 2, followed by a mandatory consecutive 22 term of 84 months.

23 THE COURT: Yes. Well, that's what I had scoped out
24 and that's the basis for the calculation of 288.

25 Upon release from imprisonment, Mr. Day shall be placed

1 on supervised release for a term of five years. This term
2 consists of three years on Count 1 and five years on Counts 2
3 and 3, with all those terms to be served concurrently and under 4 these conditions and terms.

5 First, Mr. Day shall comply with the rules and 6 regulations of the U.S. Probation Office and General Order 318.
7 Second, he shall participate in outpatient substance abuse
8 treatment and submit to drug and alcohol testing as instructed 9 by the probation officer. Mr. Day shall abstain from using 10 illicit drugs, alcohol and abusing prescription medications
11 during the period of supervision. During the period of 12 community supervision the defendant shall pay a special 13 assessment in accordance with this judgment's orders pertaining 14 to such payment.

15 The defendant shall participate in a psychological 16 psychiatric counseling or treatment program as approved and 17 directed by the probation office. And the defendant shall not 18 obtain or possess any driver's license, social security number,
19 birth certificate, passport or any other form of identification
20 without the prior written approval of the probation officer.
21 And he shall not use for any purpose or in any manner any name
22 other than his true legal name.

23 Now you have a right to appeal this sentence, Mr. Day.
24 And if you do so, you need to do so within ten days from today.
25 Please speak to Mr. Mayock who will give you all of the

1 information you need on how to prosecute an appeal from the 2 sentence that I've now imposed. And if you are in doubt and
3 need to know this, if you cannot afford to have Mr. Mayock
4 represent you on appeal, he will continue to be appointed at no
5 cost to you.

6 Now there are no counts to dismiss; is that right,
7 Mr. Brown?

8 MR. BROWN: That's right, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Is there anything further that needs
10 to be addressed?

11 MR. MAYOCK: Yes, Your Honor. I believe you said that 12 with respect to the supervised release each of the terms were to 13 run concurrently. But I don't know if you said that with 14 respect to the 60-month, 204-month and 84-month sentence. Those 15 are consecutive or concurrent?

16 THE COURT: Well, the 84 months is consecutive.

17 MR. MAYOCK: The 60 then is a concurrent sentence; is 18 that correct? I just wanted to make sure because otherwise the 19 Bureau of Prisons ~~will~~ run every sentence, if there's no record, 20 it runs consecutively.

21 THE COURT: I'm not sure how to --

22 MR. BROWN: Count 1, the 60-month term, runs concurrent
23 with Count 2, the 204-month term.

24 THE COURT: And that's what my findings were.

25 MR. MAYOCK: And then the 84-month term for the 924(C)

1 is consecutive.

2 THE COURT: Right. All right. Thank you.

3 MR. MAYOCK: Thank you, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Now let's turn to Mr. Bell, please.

5 Okay. Mr. Bell and Mr. Newman, have you had a chance
6 to review what you needed to?

7 MR. NEWMAN: We have, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Can you think of any reason why I should 9 not impose the sentence?

10 MR. NEWMAN: No, Your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Did you understand -- did you listen
12 to and understand what I said concerning the way I believe that 13 the calculations need to be articulated?

14 MR. NEWMAN: Yes, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Okay. Now I would like to proceed much as 16 I did with Mr. Day and that is to give you, Mr. Newman, a chance
17 to understand what my take is on your arguments. Then you can 18 address those in your oral arguments. Your client will be given 19 an opportunity also.

20 You have seen, Mr. Newman, that to the extent you are 21 objecting to the references in the presentence report concerning 22 the uncharged bank robberies, those have been modified and 23 changed. And I want you to know I truly have not taken those 24 into account.

25 MR. NEWMAN: I understand.

1 THE COURT: I don't have basis to consider that your
2 client committed those robberies and I don't think that he
3 should be treated that way and I haven't treated him that way in 4 my provisional thinking. So I want you to be clear about that.

5 To the extent that much of your position is based upon
6 Mr. Bell's designation as a career offender, it is that he was 7 not serving a sentence within the 15-year period that is the 8 outer scope. I think that the government's assessment of what 9 really happened, and it may be the probation officer's
10 assessment is correct too, he began serving a sentence on August 11 6th, 1981. That was aggregated. It was 30-plus year sentence.

12 The fact that he has chosen not to return from the day
13 of release was built into the sentence. It was basically for 14 the unauthorized escape. And had he not escaped, he'd have been 15 in custody past the start date which is January 29th in 1984.

16 I believe that the calculation is correct. I believe 17 that the reasons for the calculation make sense in this 18 particular case. I am not inclined to adopt your contention
19 that he should not be classified as a career offender.

20 You have also moved for a downward departure because 21 your client didn't wield a semi-automatic weapon, but instead a 22 .38 caliber weapon. I have no difficulty whatsoever in 23 rejecting that basis for a departure. Just because there's no
24 basis for departing upward under 5K2.17 doesn't mean and doesn't 25 justify flipping that concept and granting your client a

1 downward departure.

2 As to the relatively recent issue concerning his mental
3 status and his capacity, I have looked at Dr. St. John's report
4 and the diagnosis is what I think I'm required to pay most
5 attention to. The diagnosis is that Mr. Bell had borderline
6 intellectual functioning.

7 But the report itself makes it clear that while 8 immature, your client was capable of distinguishing right from 9 wrong and I don't find any basis, none, in the evidence before 10 me to suggest that the classification or the diagnosis that your 11 expert has come up with of being borderline intellectual, being 12 in the borderline intellectual functioning status warrants any 13 special consideration given the nature of this conduct. So 14 those are my initial reactions to the contentions that you have 15 asserted in response to the presentence report.

16 So that this transcript can stand alone and the Court
17 of Appeals can have a basis to evaluate from where I'm coming
18 from and how I've approached this sentencing, let me reiterate
19 what I said earlier this afternoon as to the co-defendant
20 Mr. Day. I think that the correct way of assessing the 21 guidelines, and your client is being sentenced only on Counts 2
22 and 3, is that the range for Count 2 is 188 months to 235
23 months. Count 3 brings a mandatory consecutive period of 84
24 months. So correctly stated the range would really be 272
25 months to 319 months.
